P R E F A C E.

The object of this work is to supply the schools of the Province with a course of systematic training in the culture of the speaking voice, and instruction in correct and expressive reading. The first sections of the book embrace all exercises that tend to develope and improve the vocal organization, and to improve the ear. The voice and the ear are the important agents in the music of speech; and as the voice of youth is flexible, and in the best condition for direction and culture, and the ear is quick to appreciate all the variations of tone which give expression to speech, a system of culture founded upon scientific principles cannot fail to be beneficial, and to give to our system of teaching to read some of the qualities of a true art.

These exercises as a species of vocal gymnastics are also of the first importance, as they bring into vigorous and healthy action the muscles around the chest, and those important organs, the heart, the lungs, the throat, and all the agents which combine to produce voice.

The exercises upon the vowels and consonants which are associated with the vocal exercises are founded upon the true phonetics of the language. Pronunciation is subject to all the influences of bad examples and provincial corruptions. If speech is to be correct and refined, and the true sounds of a language preserved and established, the teacher must be guided both by the approved sounds of the letters, independent of local customs, and by the action and position of the organs used to utter sounds. This method places pronunciation on a scientific basis, and protects it against the attacks and corruptions of local customs. Hence it is of the first importance in teaching to read and speak correctly, that the pupil should, by regular drill, be made familiar with the true sounds of the vowels and consonants.

It is important to remember that the voice of youth changes, and is succeeded by the voice of adult age; and any drill devoted to the culture of the first voice, without reference to the changes that must succeed it, would be positively injurious. But there are preparatory exercises in vocal gymnastics, as there are in all other gymnastics, which strengthen the muscles and quicken the senses without injury to their future development, or to the changes which adult life brings upon them; and these are most appropriate to the sphere of the school room. It is the utter neglect of this principle, the utter absence of all culture of the speaking voice in the education of youth, that makes musical speech and expressive reading such rare qualities in after life.

The sections devoted to expressive reading are explained on the principles of sentential analysis. It is true that a thorough and just understanding and conception of a passage are the best guides to its expressive delivery. But all this pre-supposes a ripened judgment, a cultivated voice, and an acute ear. The exercises of the first sections of this "Drill Book" cannot fail to secure the last two qualifications. But the first is not likely to be possessed by youth. The preparatory step is to make the pupil familiar with the structure of the sentences and the relation of all the members to each other. The sentence is the garb of the thought, and as pupils are drilled in analysis they learn to understand the bearings and relative importance of the thoughts by the study of the structure of the sentences. A pupil who could not fathom the depth and breadth of an abstract thought, or the intensity of a passion, could easily be taught to distinguish between a principal and a subordinate clause or phrase ; yet that very study would be preparing the dullest scholar for the profounder analysis of the sentiment. Hence it is considered that the first studies in elocution must be mainly guided by the analysis of the sentence. In that view the principles and rules in this book have been formed ; and a very large and long experience in teaching the art of elocution has convinced the author that this is the easiest as well as the most successful method for instruction in expressive reading.

The best hope that the author can have of this "Drill Book" is that it will be suggestive. The subject is advancing in public estimation ; and while in this Province we have done nothing yet to establish our system of teaching to read on a broad and scientific basis, its necessity has been admitted by every one. In England, professorships of Public Reading have been established in connection with leading Universities ; but the United States have gone beyond this, and in attention to teaching reading as an art have taken the foremost place. Dr. Rush was the first to place the Art of Reading on a scientific basis ; and all who have studied the subject, or taught it in any form, are indebted to his eloquent and profound treatise on the Philosophy of the Human Voice more than to any other work. To this work the author of this book is largely indebted. Appended is a list of other books which he has consulted, and which the teachers and students may find useful for reference. The plan of this book is similar to that of Professor Monroe, the Superintendent of Vocal Culture in the Public Schools of Boston, and several of the illustrations have been selected from his manual. Professor Monroe has established the success of his system in Boston, and his book may be safely taken as a model for similar exercises in Ontario.

A special series of selections follows the instruction, marked for practice ; and as most of the illustrations are similarly marked, the attention of the reader is directed to the explanation of the marks on page XII.

The Examination Papers and Questions at the end of the book form an original, novel, and most important feature of the work. They demand a knowledge of theory from the candidate, and this knowledge, especially to teachers, is, to say the least of it, as necessary as skill in reading well. They were suggested to the author by one of the County Inspectors, who understood that skill in reading well was not sufficient for the successful teacher, and who was anxious to test candidates in their knowledge of principles. The questions have been prepared with that object, and as they demand from the candidate not only a knowledge of the theory of good reading, but a knowledge of the subject-matter and spirit of the text, the author trusts they will be suggestive and useful.

Method of Using the Drill Book.

The exercises and instruction in this book are designed and arranged for all grades of pupils in Public and Collegiate Schools. These exercises, however, may very properly be divided into two branches, viz. : (1) Those which can be safely practised by the very lowest grades, and (2) those which are best adapted to the higher grades. The table of contents indicates these two branches by having all that is adapted to the capacity of the lower grades printed in roman type, and all that is adapted to the higher grades in small capitals.

Thus the Breathing and Chest exercises may safely and advantageously be commenced in the alphabet class ; and to that and all the lower grades the practice in sounding correctly, and with all the appropriate vocal gymnastics, the vowels and consonants is indispensable.

The principles of expressive reading, for their full comprehension, require the experience and knowledge of grammar and analysis, which can scarcely be expected before pupils have passed through the Fourth Reader. A few, however, of the leading principles, such as those for Inflection, and even for Pause—the former depending on the completeness or incompleteness of the thought or the sentence, and the latter on the parts of speech—may be introduced with the studies of the Third and certainly with those of the Fourth Reader.

The orotund voice belongs to the period of early manhood, when the second voice has set in ; and although it is quite fitting that the classes just entering on that period should have some knowledge of the method by which the voice of manhood can be strengthened and improved, yet it would be useless and unwise to drill the immature voice of youth in this quality, which especially belongs to the age of manhood.

The Physical Culture of Chapter III., Section I., is an occasional exercise, which may be varied, lengthened or curtailed, according to the necessities and time of the pupils.

The really important exercises begin with the second section. The teacher should in successive lessons and exercises practise the movements one after the other, but he should not dwell too long on any one exercise. The best method is to take portions of several lessons in each lesson :—Chest exercises, Breathing, Vocalization, Articulation, and even Inflection and Pitch, following each other in order, but no one singly occupying the whole time of a lesson.

If the teacher is able to set the example of expressive reading, he should always start a practice with simultaneous reading, naming as he gives the example, with his own voice, the leading features of the passage.

SECTION I.

CHAPTER I.

The Organs of Speech.

1. An extensive knowledge of the vocal organization is not necessary to the study of delivery or of music; but as the names of the vocal organs are often used, and their action and position are frequently referred to in all treatises on vocal culture, a very brief view of their structures will aid the lessons of the teacher and the studies of the pupil.

2. The chest is the seat of the vocal organs. It consists of a bony framework connected by elastic muscles. This framework is formed by the breastbone, or sternum, placed perpendicularly in front of the breast, and the twelve pairs of ribs which are attached behind to twelve dorsal vertebræ, and the upper ones in front to the sternum, and the lower ones to each other. These ribs form the wall protecting the important organs of the chest; and, although bony in their structure, they are joined to the vertebræ, to the sternum and to each other by a soft and elastic hinge, so that they offer no impediment to the free action of the lungs. In fact, all judicious exercises of the arms and of the voice enlarge the cavity of the chest, and strengthen the outer walls as well as the internal organs.

3. These organs consist of the heart and the lungs, the lungs occupying the cavity of the chest on each side of the heart. They fill the chest cavity. They constitute the basis of the breathing and blood-circulating organs, and are separated from the stomach and blood-creating organs and the intestines by another organ of great importance to the full exercise and development of the lungs and the voice—the diaphragm. The diaphragm is a membrane that lies across the body, and by its muscular contraction and dilatation it becomes the principal agent in inspiration and expiration.

4. The lungs are formed of innumerable cells into which the air enters, and over which the blood passes, that it may be purified before it re-enters the heart for circulation. All these vessels, bronchial arteries, veins, lymphatics and nerves, are held in one compact form by the cellular tissue, called parenchyma. The lungs receive the outward air through another important vocal organ, the trachea, or windpipe. This organ, in its lower part, branches off into two divisions, which pass to the right and left, and are subdivided and ramified throughout the entire lungs. At the top of the windpipe is the larynx, whose structure is especially adapted to produce voice. The construction of this organ is complicated, and too minute for explanation in this work. It is sufficient to state that it acts upon the passage of the air by the contraction of its muscles and cords. Its opening, or entrance, is called the glottis, which opens or closes as we will to produce voice. When the passage is entirely opened no sound is produced ; but as we will to speak or sing the aperture is narrowed, the edges of the glottis vibrate, and sound is heard. Just above the larynx, and between it and the mouth, is a broader passage called the pharynx, which is the entrance to the mouth ; and this pharynx can be contracted and expanded by the will so as to form important modifications of speech.

5. The palate of the mouth is arched, and admirably adapted as a sounding board to give tone and purity to the voice, and the back of the palate is soft and pendulous, forming a tongue-like projection called the uvula. This little organ has very important uses in the production of voice. It is always moving, elevated or depressed as we speak, and can be elevated at will after a little practice. When it is very much depressed and the larynx raised, the breath passes into the nose and the voice becomes disagreeably nasal, losing all purity of tone. Hence the importance of controlling its action, as the conditions of pure tone require the elevation of the uvula, the depression of the larynx, and the enlargement to the fullest extent of the pharynx.

6. The tongue, teeth and lips are all essential organs of speech. The deep and rich tones of the orotund voice depend upon the depression and proper action of the tongue; the fulness and clearness of consonant sounds—that is, correct articulation—is due to a vigorous action of the teeth combining with the tongue; and while protruding or indolent action of the lips is ungraceful, their right management completes the finished and graceful execution of speech.

7. The inhalation of breath is a most important function of vocal exercise. Frequent breathing exercises, when executed with vigour, so as to fill the lungs to their utmost capacity, open and bring into action the remote cells which lie almost inactive during the process of common conversation, and thus have a most beneficial effect on the general health.

8. Again, the proper action of the diaphragm and the abdominal muscles contributes chiefly to secure vigour and power and purity of voice. The diaphragm expels the air by relaxing and curving upwards, and thus, aided by the abdominal muscles, drives out the voice with the utmost force, while the bony structure around the upper organ is kept steady and easy. On the other hand, when we inhale, the lungs fall, the diaphragm is contracted, and the curve becomes flattened and depressed.

9. The vocal cords must be acted upon by the air ; and as it always demands more air for speech and song than for common respiration, it will be seen how important it is to renew incessantly the supplies. Besides, these vocal cords become more vigorous and regular in their action, with judicious practice. In common practice, as of speech, it has been calculated that they undergo 240 different changes at the mere will of the speaker. Great singers can far exceed this, as their organs are under constant discipline ; and it is reported of Madame Mara that she could effect as many as 2,000 changes.

10. It is practice that gives this great power to these cords. But the practice must be scientific. It then is never attended by bad consequences ; and when public speakers lose their voices the injury is never caused by over-speaking, but by speaking in violation of the physiological laws which govern the voice and secure its health.

Management of the Breath.

11. The management of the breath demands careful attention. One invariable rule should be observed in all vocal practices—the speaker or reader should inhale through the nostrils. It brings into action the nasal passages, which play an important part in speech. It prevents that irritation of the throat which often follows a sudden and strong inhalation through the mouth ; and its general effect, too, is beneficial to the whole vocal structure.

12. “ Nothing can be more hurtful to the pure quality of the voice, and nothing scarcely more injurious to the larynx and the lungs, than the habit of gasping in the air, without any system or method, by the open mouth. Take this as a golden rule, that the breath should, not merely when reading or speaking, though then I hold it indispensable, but at all times and under all circumstances, be taken into the lungs only through the nostrils. I assure you most earnestly, that if there be any tendency to disease or weakness of the lungs or of the larynx, trachea or bronchial tubes, the observance of this rule is of vital importance to health—nay, I am sure I am not going too far when I say it is in some extreme cases a matter almost of life or death. Believe me, that all most all the injury which clergymen and public speakers do themselves in the discharge of their duties in the church or on the platform, arises from this very common but most erroneous habit of gasping or pumping in the air through the open mouth.”—Professor Plumptre, of King's College, London.

13. The Rev. A. S. Thelwall, an eminent elocutionist, also of King's College, wrote that “the habit of taking in breath only through the nostrils could not well be overrated.” George Catlin, the well-known North American Indian, traveller, bears similar evidence to the value of this habit, and states that the Indians, when on the war track or the hunting expedition, practise this habit and regard it as indispensable to maintain their physical energy.

14. THE METHOD OF PRACTICE.—There is no necessity to close the mouth. “A slight application of the tongue to the roof of the mouth, accompanied at the same time with a very slight and almost imperceptible drawing back of the head, will cause a very large amount of air to enter the lungs, quite noiselessly, by the passage of the nostrils.” But, in fact, when once the habit has been acquired, it is done unconsciously and without any formal effort. Although the habit may be easily acquired at any age, it should commence in early life and should be practised at all times. “The habit of sleeping with the mouth open in early life has a very injurious effect on the breathing and vocal organs ; and not only this, but it tends to distort the jaw bones and deform the teeth.” (Dr. Trall.)

15. Another habit of great importance is that of breathing at regular intervals when speaking. The common practice is to speak or read until the lungs are emptied, and then to inhale with great force. This seriously irritates and finally injures the vocal structure. The reader or speaker should breathe every time he pauses ; and as pausing occurs far more frequently than the grammatical punctuation indicates, there are occasions for breathing after the utterance of every three or four words. This is most important to all who have to speak before large assemblies, as there is then always a greater consumption of breath. The exhaustion and the decay of vocal power is largely due to the neglect of this economy in breathing.

16. The exercises offered in this work are especially adapted to cultivate the management and economy of breath ; and teachers as well as pupils who will faithfully practise them will derive the greatest benefit from them.

CHAPTER II.

17. Hints and Suggestions to Teacher.

I. Do not continue too long at one exercise ; vary the exercises.

II. Practise frequently and regularly rather than long. Daily practice of ten minutes will produce better results than one hour or two hours per week.

III. Let the vocal exercises generally follow some study which has been wearisome or exacting on the mind. The breathing and shouting are healthful, and always welcomed by the pupils. It is science in amusement.

IV. Practise in the open air as much as possible, and when in the school room let the air be pure as possible, windows open, etc.

V. Practise standing up, body erect as at military drill. Do not allow the pupils to sway about or use any ungraceful action or position.

VI. Insist upon all exercises being uniform, simultaneous and instantaneous.

VII. Throw life and enthusiasm into every exercise by your own EXAMPLE.

VIII. Vary the exercises by occasionally getting one pupil or a small group of pupils to go through any practice, while the others look on and listen.

IX. Do not be afraid of doing an exercise yourself before the class. If you fail, the laugh that follows will do all good.

X. Do nothing in excess, as excess injures. Use not too much violence with the arms, and never let the voice exercises get so loud as to be unpleasant or harsh.

XI. Change often from the violent to the gentle, and vice versa.

XII. If you have room, either in the school room or the play ground, get the pupils to practise vocal exercises of every kind when marching, keeping time with feet, arms, and voices in harmony.

CHAPTER III.

General Physical Culture.

18. Gymnastic exercises, especially such as act on the chest muscles, are of great importance, and should always be associated with the special exercises of the succeeding sections.

19. It is always useful to commence the special vocal practice with some preliminary muscular actions, and any of the preparatory movements of gymnastic establishments will serve the purpose.

20. The following exercises, taken from various sources, will assist to guide teachers who have had no previous drill.

CARRIAGE OF THE BODY.

21. Place the feet close together, so that the heels shall touch at the side, and the toes be pointed to right and left like a V; keep the knees straight, let the arms hang down straight from the shoulders, and the elbows be turned in and close to the sides; the middle finger should be parallel with the seam of the pants, or if in open file the palms of the hand are to be turned full to the front, with the thumb close to the forefinger; the hip should be drawn back and the breast advanced, but without any appearance of stiffness; the body straight and inclining forward, so that the weight of the body may bear principally on the fore part of the feet; the head to be erect but not thrown back, the chin slightly drawn in, and the eyes looking straight to the front.

Extension—First Exercise.

I. Stretch the hands straight in front, level with the shoulders, the palms meeting.

II. Separate the hands, keeping them at the same level, arms straight, and try to make the backs of the hands meet behind.

Repeat many times, the teacher calling out one, two—one, two, not too fast. After expertness has been acquired, let the pupils also call out one, two.

Second Exercise.

I. Bring hands and arms to the front till the fingers meet at the points; then raise them with circular motion over the head, tips of fingers still touching.

II. Throw the hands up, separating them, extending the arms smartly, palms turned inwards; then force them obliquely back and let them fall gradually to the position of "attention"; keep the neck and chest elevated.

24. Third Exercise.

I. Stretch the hands in front as in first exercise, palms upwards.

II. Close the hands and bring the elbows smartly back until the hands are level with the sides.

III. Send forth again with great vigour.

25. Fourth Exercise.

I. Bend the arms, turning the closed hands upwards until they touch the shoulders.

II. Drive the arms upwards with the utmost force.

III. Bring them down with equal energy.

26. Fifth Exercise.

I. Raise the hands in front of the body to the full extent of the arms, and in line with the mouth, palms meeting, but without noise.

II. Separate the hands smartly, throwing them well back, slanting downwards; at the same time raise the body on the fore part of the feet.

III. Resume position No. I. In this exercise repeat one and two several times before giving three.

27. Sixth Exercise.

I. Assume position, throwing the weight of the body on the point of the feet. Raise the hands clenched in front of the body as in Exercise 5.

II. Separate the hands smartly, throwing the arms back in line with the shoulders, back of the hand downwards.

III. Swing the arms round as quickly as possible from front to rear.

Seventh Exercise.

I. Assume position. Stretch out both hands, with fists tightly closed.

II. Bring them slowly over the head, and make them revolve in circles, first forward and then backward. Perform this exercise very slowly. Practise also walking, and especially up a hill.

Pole Exercise.

I. Take a pole, light, and about six feet long; hold it with the two arms extended from each other, and as near the ends of the pole as possible.

II. Now raise it and whirl it behind the head, then over to the front.

III. Whirl it from one side to the other, taking it behind the head with one movement, then passing in a circuit until it reaches the other side of the body, and is brought round again to the front. Repeat this exercise many times, counting aloud each circuit made until you reach fifty. This is a splendid exercise for developing the chest.

Marching Exercise.

I. Get the class to march in order, and sing any song or repeat the words of a poem as they march. March quickly and recite slowly.

II. March slowly and recite quickly.

Exercises of this kind are all the better for being practised under difficulties, as over uneven ground, or up a hill or stairs;

they not only strengthen the lungs, but train the pupil to control the breathing and speaking actions ; so that whatever the limbs may be doing, the lungs and vocal organs can act independently of them.

31. It is not necessary to go through all these exercises every time the class is to be drilled in the regular voice practice that follows. One or two of them will suffice before each of the regular exercises.

32. Finally, all who wish to strengthen the vocal organization ought to sustain the general health by general exercise and temperance. All alcoholic drinks and tobacco are exceedingly injurious to the delicate organs of the voice. Tight compressions around the chest should never be used ; the throat should be free and as open to the air as possible, winter or summer. People who wrap their throats up in great folds of cloth to keep them from catching cold, are really inviting the colds they fear. The slightest exposure endangers the throat so carefully wrapped up. The open throat is not only the best to strengthen the internal organs, but the best guard against colds. The chest, and back, and throat should also be sponged with cold water every morning throughout the year.

33. A proper diet also is of the first importance, besides abstinence from spirits and tobacco ; all greasy food, too much butter, sweets, candies, ice creams, very cold and very hot drinks, are detrimental to the production of a good voice

SECTION II.

CHAPTER I.

Chest Exercises.

(Adapted from Monroe's Manual.)

34. Breathing Exercises.

I. Position.—Feet moderately apart; one foot slightly in advance of the other; body resting on one foot; arms akimbo; fingers pressing abdominal muscles in front, and the thumbs on the dorsal or back muscles on each side of the spine; the head erect, but not stiff; shoulders thrown backward and downward.

II. Active Chest.—Raise and expand the chest and the upper part of the body, throwing it slightly back, as if defying a blow. Fig. 1.

III. Passive Chest.—Relax the muscles; let the chest fall, and the entire relapse as when fatigued and resting. Repeat these exercises six times. Aim at gracefulness and vigour in sustaining the active chest, as it is the position best adapted for all future exercises. See Fig. 1.

35. Deep Breathing.

I. Inhale quickly through the nostrils, and keep the shoulders still.

II. Send out the breath through the mouth slowly and quietly, as in common breathing. Sustain the active position.

Fig. 1.

III. Repeat six times, sending out the breath alternately through the mouth and through the nostrils.

36. Effusive Breathing.

I. Active Position. Draw in a full breath to the greatest capacity of the lungs. Hold on for a few seconds, then exhale through the open mouth, as if gently sounding the letter h.

II. Repeat six times.

37. Expulsive Breathing.

I. Draw in the fullest breath as before, then expel with considerable force as in a whispered cough, but prolonged as much as possible.

II. Repeat six times.

38. Explosive Breathing.

I. Inhale as before; then drive out the breath with sudden and great force, as if whispering very loudly "who" to a person in the distance.

The mouth should be well opened, and the breath should be driven forward in a straight column to the front of the mouth, as if aiming to strike a distant object. Avoid irritating the throat. Whenever the exercise causes coughing, the effort is too violent.

II. Repeat six times.

39. Abrupt Breathing.

I. Draw in the breath in jerks, and expel in jerks.

II. Draw in jerks, and expel with a sudden and brief whisper.

40. Whisper Exercise.

I. Read any passage in a loud, distinct whisper, so that every word shall be clearly heard by a person in the distance.

This exercise must not be continued too long, and when the head begins to feel dizzy it should be stopped.

41. Recapitulatory Exercises.

Repeat each of the above exercises in the order given, and with as little pause between as possible.

CHEST AND ARM MOVEMENTS.

42. Percussion of the Chest.

I. Fix the arms bent as in Fig. 2, hands open towards the chest, fingers slightly bent, so as to be able to tap the chest just below the collar bone. Take a deep inspiration through the nostrils. Hold the breath in during the exercise.

Fig. 2.

II. Strike on the chest rapid percussive blows with the flat of the fingers, wrists held slack. Strike as long as four can be counted, common time.

III. Give out breath through nostrils, count two, inhale deep, breathe as before ; two counts. Repeat first exercise.

Caution.—The blows should be light at first ; then when the practice is easy they may be increased in force, but must always be free from violence.

43. Percussion with Arm Movement.

I. Inhale full breath, swing the arms from the shoulder alternately with slack joints, giving elastic, but not heavy blows upon the chest with the flat of the fingers, just below the collar bone. The right hand strikes upon the left side of the chest, and left upon the right side ; give two blows each time with each hand. See Fig. 3.

Fig. 3.

II. Exhale and inhale as before, and repeat six times.

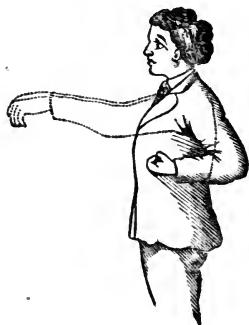

CHAPTER II.

44. Chest Expansion, with Breath Exercises.

Position.—Elbows sharply bent and close to the side ; fore-arm horizontal, fists clenched, palm upward. Take a deep breath and hold it in.

I. Strike forward with force and grace, relaxing the muscles and opening the hands, palm downwards.

II. Draw arms energetically back to former position, expanding the chest by the action.

45. Breathing accompanying Action.

I. Hold the arms out as in 1, then inhale. When the lungs are filled, draw the arms suddenly in and expel breath at the same time.

Repeat six times.

I. Raise the arms above the head and inhale.

II. Draw them suddenly down and expel breath. Repeat six times.

46. Shoulder Movement—Bent Arms.

Clenched fists at the side of the shoulders, palms forward, fore arms vertical.

I. Bring the open hands, palms inward, so as to touch each other, about three inches in front of chin. Inhale air.

II. Throw the fore arms back to the side, as in commencing positions, fists clenched, palms outward. While practising this movement expel the breath.

Repeat six times.

47. Breathing and Arm Action combined.

I. Bring the tips of the fingers to the shoulders, and inhale the breath.

II. Strike downwards with the fists clenched and the palms turned to the front; drive out the breath with the movement.

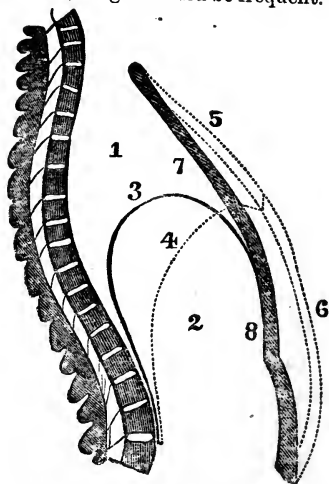

In this movement keep the body steady and let the expulsion of the breath be done by the abdominal muscles and diaphragm.

Exercises on the Abdominal Muscles.

48. The power of being able to contract and expand the lungs instantaneously, with vigour and at will, is very necessary to energetic vocal exercises. It enables the speaker to take a full breath and to send forth his voice without weariness. Hence exercises upon the pectoral and abdominal muscles and the diaphragm should be frequent.

A side view of the chest and abdomen in respiration. 1. Cavity of the chest. 2. Cavity of the abdomen. 3. Line of direction for the diaphragm when relaxed in expiration. 4. Line of direction when contracted in inspiration. 5, 6. Position of the front walls of the chest and abdomen in inspiration. 7, 8. Their position in expiration.

ACTION OF THE DIAPHRAGM.

I. (1) Contract and expand the muscles of the abdomen several times with the lungs filled. (2.) Repeat while inhaling and expelling the breath, but not rapidly.

II. Inhale breath so that the abdomen is thrown outwards and becomes convex.

III. Expel the breath, and the abdomen is drawn inward and flattened.

These exercises are silent, and they should never be practised with a full stomach, nor any stricture on the waist.

49. Voice and Arm Movement.

Repeat exercises of par. 45, 46, 47.

But instead of driving out mere breath, convert breath into sound, uttering the exclamation Ha, each time. Avoid the violence which irritates the throat, and do not send out breath mixed with voice as in a half whisper. The tone should be pure and quick.

Breath and Voice Alternately.

I. Inhale as before, retain the breath a moment, then sound ah (as in at) in a sudden explosive whisper twice, and the third time let the ah be a voice sound. There must be no pause between the whisper and the voice sound. Thus :

Whisper.	Whisper.	Voice.
ah	ah	ah

II. Take breath after every third utterance, and repeat six times.

In practising the last exercises, the glottis, or mouth of the windpipe is contracted and shut up as it were for a moment, and the whisper and sound are sent forth with accumulated explosive force.

50. How to stand and hold the Book when reading aloud.

I. Position.—The reader should stand erect but not stiff. The head should be elevated but not thrown back.

II. The eyes should not be fixed on the book, but as the reader takes in from time to time, with a rapid glance at the book, as many words as he can remember, he should look and read to the audience, especially to that part that fronts him.

III. The effect will be better if, when reading the words, he occasionally moves the direction of his eyes from one side to the other, and to the farthest part of the room as well as to that immediately near him.

IV. The book should be held in the left hand. It should never be raised so high as to conceal the face, nor held so low as to compel the reader to bend his head over it

V. The right hand may rest at the side of the body. But if the reader wishes to gesticulate the whole arm should be raised occasionally, all the movement being from the shoulder, not the elbow. The elbow, however, will be frequently bent, and at various angles as the reader may please. The lower limbs must be gracefully and easily erect, the right foot in advance and the left turned a little towards the left.

VI. If the reader wish to turn to one or the other side of the room, he must not turn his body sideways, but only his head. He may, however, change the position of his feet. When sitting, the upper part of the body should be erect as when standing.

CHAPTER III.

PRODUCTION OF PURE TONES.

51. Pure tones are the healthiest as well as most agreeable, both in speaking and singing. All nasal sounds, huskiness, wheezing, or shrill or guttural sounds are impure, and are caused by a wrong use of the organs of speech, and by defective breathing.

MANAGEMENT OF THE MOUTH.

52. Let the teacher, before he commences to give his instruction, study the processes of producing pure tones before a mirror placed so that the light shall fall on the back part of the mouth. If he sound ah in a deep full tone, he will see the palate and the uvula, or little tongue at the back of the mouth rise, while the tongue lies flat and the top of the windpipe or trachea descends. Let him then endeavour to sound ah with a nasal twang, and he will see the uvula fall and appear to touch the tongue; this action closes the mouth and forces the sound into the nostrils. With this preparation for forming pure sound, the teacher will be able to conduct the following exercises:—

Interior of the mouth
when the tone is impure.

Fig. 1.

Interior of the mouth
when the tone is pure.

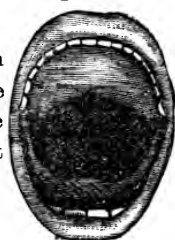

Fig. 2.

I. Direct the pupil to open the mouth, as in Fig. 2. The uvula is raised; the top of the larynx is depressed; the root of the tongue is depressed.

53. The action is similar to that of gaping, and to accomplish it the pupil is recommended “to think a gape.” If the gaping does not succeed, take hold—or imagine you are taking hold—of some heavy object, and lift it with all your might. This will raise the uvula and widen to the necessary extent the vocal aperture. The dark part of Fig. No. 2 shows this opening; and as the action on this part of the pharynx pushes it forward, it can be felt by placing the finger at the front of the neck, close under the jaw.

54. The larynx rises and falls as the voice rises and falls. This may be seen in a mirror, and felt outwardly by touching the Adam's apple. Hence the importance of being able to control this organ at will, as all the grandest effects of the voice are accomplished by this elevation of the uvula and depression of the larynx and the tongue.

II. The mouth being fixed as described, (1) sound ah in the deepest tone; (2) sound ah one tone higher; (3) proceed upwards to the highest note that can be sounded in pure tone; (4) descend to the lowest note, just as in the musical gamut.

55. The teacher should practise this exercise first himself before a mirror. He will then see the back part of the mouth contract as he rises in pitch, and expand as he descends. These are the conditions necessary to produce pure tone. A well-opened mouth, therefore, must be insisted upon, as it is indispensable to full pure tone; a contracted mouth gives a contracted and nasal tone.

PURE TONE CONTINUED.

III. Rules:—1. Fill the lungs as usual.

2. Send the voice out in a straight column to the front of the mouth.

3. Keep the head erect, but not stiff, and the chest and shoulders firm and steady. Do not drag them up, or twist or bend them. The action of expelling sound, like that of speaking, is best done when it is gracefully done. Hence the effort is made by the working of the muscles of the abdomen and the relaxation and contraction of the diaphragm, while the upper part of the chest, the shoulders, and the collar bone scarcely seem to move.

IV. Sound ah as sounded in "balm," opening the mouth as in

Fig. 1.

Fig. 1. The lips are drawn back at each end as in smiling. Begin this and all succeeding sounds very gently, increase the force until the breath is half exhausted ; then begin to reduce the force, so that the voice may seem to take an oval form, swelling in the centre and tapering off at the ends.

V. Sound awe in the same way as No. IV., opening the mouth as in Fig. 2.

The cheeks are brought nearer to the teeth, the two ends of the lips are not so far asunder as in ah, but the opening above and below is wider.

VI. Sound o the same as the preceding vowels. The difference between the form of the mouth in this sound is that in Fig. 2 the lips are further apart, in Fig. 3 they are more protruded, and braced and oval in form. Observe that o is diphthongal ; i.e., it ends in oo, as in tool.

Fig. 4.

VII. Sound oo, fixing the mouth as in Fig. 4. The lips are more contracted and protruded than in the other exercises.

VIII. Sound a as in male, Fig. 5. The lips are not oval but nearly parallel ; the teeth are displayed and the mouth presents a long narrow slit ; a is diphthongal, ending in e.

Fig. 6.

IX. Finally, sound ee as in eel, Fig. 6. The lips are brought nearer, the transverse slit being more contracted than in the last sound.

57. When skill and correctness in producing each of the above vowel sounds, which really are the vowels from which all other vowel sounds are derived, are acquired, the exercise should be often continuous, passing without interruption from one vowel sound into another.

58. The teacher should warn the pupils against forcing the voice in this practice. When the sound is in any way impure or harsh, let less muscular effort be used. Soften down the tones.

CHAPTER IV.

VOWEL AND DIPHTHONGAL SOUNDS.

59. Correct and refined pronunciation depends very much on the right sounding of the vowels and diphthongs ; complete and distinct pronunciation on the right sounding of the consonants. After the exercise on the last section, the pupils should be drilled in the other vowel sounds as given in the following table.

60. The teacher will find it necessary to watch carefully the action of the lips, so that no ungraceful arrangement be made. Every care should be taken to secure a correct and refined pronunciation, free from provincialisms ; and if the attention be fixed on the examples attached to each vowel, and the sound of the vowel accord with the example, the proper sound will follow.

VOWEL SOUNDS, OR TONIC ELEMENTS.

61.

SIMPLE VOWELS.

1. A, as in arm, balm.
2. A, as in at, can.

3. A, as in all, law.
4. E, as in eve, thee.
5. E, as in err.
6. E, as in end, met.
7. I, as in in, charity.
8. O, as in or, form.
9. O, as in on, cot.
10. U, as in up.
11. U, as in bull, full.
12. OO (long), ooze, moon.
13. OO (short), look, book.

62.

COMPOUND VOWELS.

14. A, as in ale, compounded of a and e.
15. I, as in ice, compounded of a, in far, or u, in run, and i, in it.
16. O, as in old, compounded of o and oo.
17. OU, as in our, compounded of a, in at, and oo.
18. OI, as in oil, compounded of aw, in all, and i, in it.
19. U, as in use, compounded of ee and oo.

EXPLANATION.

A in ale is compound, as in a correct and refined utterance the vanish or final sound passes into ee. In the north of Ireland and Scotland the vulgar sound of this letter is given without this final ee, which gives gate the sound approaching get, the e being prolonged.

I. In the north of England and in some parts of Ireland i is pronounced like oi in point. Thackeray illustrates this in the conversation of Captain Costigan in "Pendennis." The analysis of the sound shows it to be compounded of a in an, or, as Vandenhoff more correctly maintains, u in run, and i in it.

When pupils mispronounce the a in gate, by omitting the vanishing e, let them sound the following combinations :—

Ga—eet (gate).

Fa—eet (fate).

Ra—eet (rate).

The a is sounded as usual, but the ee follows quickly and rapidly in the vanishing sound.

64. When the I is sounded like oi, the pupil should combine the elements slowly at first, then rapidly, as fu—in (fine); sounding the u like u in fun, and the i like i in it.

O properly sounded finishes or vanishes in a slight tendency to oo as in moon, as Ooold. In the south of England, and especially in London, the people introduce the sound of e in get before o. Thus tone becomes te—un; the e like e in met. Ou is compounded of a in an and oo in moon.

65. Vulgar pronunciation often leaves out the final oo before r; thus our is pronounced like ar. In London and in New England the sound of e in met is introduced before the oo, instead of Italian a; as he—oos (house), sounding the e like e in met.

66. Correct by changing the e sound to a sound, as in at.

67. Oi is compounded of a in awe and i in it.

U is compounded of i in it and oo in ooze.

68. Attention should be given to the true sound of short i (No. 7, table of vowels) in such words as charity, ability, &c

The general practice in this country is to sound the i in such combinations, like u, and words of the above kind are pronounced charuty, abiluty, and even "it" is often pronounced ut. The same vulgarity marks the pronunciation of become, before, behold, &c. These and similar words in which the short e should be sounded like short i, are pronounced even by the educated classes as if spelt buhold, bucome, butween, instead of bi-hold, bi-come, bi-tween, the i being sounded as i in ill.

CHAPTER V.

VOICE PRACTICE ON VOWELS.

69. All the vowels in Table No. 1, par. 61, should in succession be used in the exercises that follow. Pure speech tones are always best acquired by practice on these elements,

I. Assume the proper position. Inhale through the nostrils. Expel the breath with sudden and great force, uttering the sound Ho in half whisper and half voice. Repeat three times.

II. Inhale as usual. Let the mouth be opened as wide as possible, the palate raised, the larynx and base of the tongue depressed, the lower jaw dropped. Then sound with each breath inhaled the following vowels and the illustrative words that follow them. The sound of each vowel and word should commence softly, advance to greater force, and then soften down again at the end.

1. A. Arm, calm, palm, alarm.
2. A. Awe, all, call, pall, fall.
3. Ho. Flow, go, row, lo, know.

4. Oo. Hoo, coo, rue, do, pool.
5. Oo (short). Book, look.
6. A. Way, gay, main, thane.
7. E. (long). Eel, seal, peel, reel.
8. E. (short). End, err, ell, elm.
9. I. (short). It, city, pity, ability.
10. O. (short). On, God, sob, sod.
11. U. Up, urn, unto, under.
12. U. Bull, pull, put, full.
13. I. (long). Hind, wind, mine, sigh.
14. Oi. Oil, foil, toil, coil.
15. Ou. Our, power, dower, coward.
16. U. Hew, due, infuse.

70.

Various Methods of Practice.

I. After the practice indicated, par. 69, II., sound each word and vowel in a powerful and distinct whisper.

II. Pour them forth as if calling to a person afar off.

Explosive Practice.

III. Sound the vowel ah twice in a whisper, and the third time in voice sound as explained in par. 49.

72. The effort is quick and loud when converted into sound; clear and cutting like a pistol explosion. The pupil should take care to convert all the breath when made vocal into full pure sound. By placing the hand opposite and close to the mouth, he will feel the wasted breath when the sound is impure. It is important both for health and purity of tone, that all the breath in this part of the exercise should be converted into sound.

After a little practice, the pupil should endeavour to give as many as forty or fifty exercises with one breath inhaled.

IV. Sustain each vowel sound as long as the breath will hold out.

V. Attack each vowel sound suddenly, and quit as suddenly.

VI. Increase and diminish the force of each sound alternately.

VII. Sound each vowel (1) with a rising inflection. (2) with a falling inflection. (3) with circumflex inflections. (See Article Inflection, Sec. III.)

ANALYSIS OF VOWEL SOUNDS ACCORDING TO LENGTH OR QUANTITY.

73. There is an analogy between certain vowels, dependent upon the time occupied in their utterance. Certain vowels, which must be rapidly uttered, appear to be derived from others which allow and demand a longer time for delivery. Phonographic, which is the same as phonetic vocalization, depends on this analogy, and a careful distinction between long and short vowels is necessary to the best delivery.

74. Vowels arranged according to Length.

Long.	Short.
1. A—rm.	An, A—sk.
2. A—ll.	O—n.
3. A—le.	E—ll.
4. Ee—l.	I—ll.
5. U—rn.	U—p.
6. Oo—ze.	Foot, Bull.

75. Caution.—The tendency to sound i like u in such words as charity, has been noticed. There is also a similar tendency to sound e and o, when short, like u, as in the following examples :—

Elegant	is pronounced	Elegant.
Abundance	“	Abundunce.
Agony	“	Aguny.
Enemy	“	Enumy.
Event	“	Uvent.
Ruin	“	Roon.
Poem	“	Poum.
Contentment	“	Contentmunt.
&c., &c.		&c., &c.

76. The following two modes of practice for acquiring a correct utterance of vowels are recommended :—

I. Take a spelling book or dictionary; select all words containing vowels wrongly pronounced, and sound the words syllable by syllable; then repeat the word.

II. Select any sentence, and direct the class to sound every vowel in each word exactly as it is sounded in the word, and let the pupils name the number in the vowel table, par. 61, opposite to the vowel.

Example.

¹⁰ ¹⁷ ² ¹⁷ ¹⁰ ¹⁰ ³ ¹⁰ ² ² ⁷
The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,

¹⁰ ⁹ ⁶ ⁶ ¹⁰ ¹⁴ ¹⁶ ⁷ ⁶
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,

¹⁴ ³ ⁷ ⁷ ⁷ ⁵ ⁷ ² ⁷ ⁹
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,

And like this unsubstantial pageant faded,

⁴ ⁹ ² ² ⁷ ¹⁵
Leave not a rack behind.

10

77. Explanation.—The 10 over e means that e is sounded like the vowel u No. 10, which is the rule for its sound in the before a consonant ; 17 over cloud means that ou is sounded as the compound vowel No. 17 ; and so on to the end.

The pupil should read a line first, then sound the vowels of that line as marked above.

This practice can be applied to all the reading exercises, and should be frequent.

CHAPTER VI.

ARTICULATION.

78. Articulation means the correct and complete sounding of the consonants in words. Correct articulation makes the words understood, and is therefore indispensable to intelligible speech. Certain consonants allow the voice to dwell upon them ; hence they are important instruments for expressing time, inflection and emphasis.

79. The full sounding of consonants is greatly neglected in music, as the voice of the singer only dwells on the vowels ; whence vowels are called in the music of song the elements of quantity. But although consonants cannot be sung—i.e., dwelt upon—in music like vowels, they ought to be uttered as completely as in speech. Attention to this law forms a part of the elocution of music, and is never neglected by the best class of vocalists. In speech, however, consonants, especially the liquids l, m, n, ng and r, are proper elements of quantity, and by their full and distinct utterance the language of the speaker becomes expressive and is understood.

RULES FOR PERFECT ARTICULATION.

I. Have the lungs well filled, and never attempt to speak with empty lungs.

II. Never send out the breath before the sound of the letter or word.

III. Always move the muscles of the mouth and the tongue and jaws with force and quickness.

IV. Let the action of these organs when uttering a letter sound be always equal in force to the force with which the breath is expelled, i. e., to the energy intended for the voice.

V. Avoid making faces, pushing out the lips, or twisting them ungracefully about.

VI. Open the mouth wide enough to admit at least one finger between the teeth.

VII. Always drop the lower jaw when sounding a letter or word.

81.

ARRANGEMENT OF CONSONANTS

In the Order of their Formation.

Atonics or Aspirants.				Sub-tonics or Sub-vocals.
Name.		Sound.		Name.		Sound.
P	as in	ip,	pop	B	as in	ebb,	bab
Wh	"	why		W	"	way
F	"	if,	fif	V	"	iv,	revive
Th	"	ith	thin	Th	"	ith,	thither
S	"	iss,	sis	Z	" is,	zuz,	nose
T	"	it,	tat	D	"	id,	did
Sh	"	ish,	shush	Zh	"	azure,	vision
H	"	ha,	ha	Y	"	yay
K	"	ik,	kik	G	"	egg,	gig
Ch	"	such		J	"	edge,	judge

Liquids.

Name.		Sound.
M	as in	em, mum
N	"	en, nun
L	"	ill, lull
R (initial)	"	row
R (final)	"	ore, far
Ng	"	ing, singing

82. The atonic consonants are whispered or breathed, and not vocal ; hence the name atonic, without tone.

83. The sub-tonics have a tone, but not as distinct as that of vowels, hence their name.

84. R initial is rougher than R final. Initial R is delivered with a slight vibration of the end of the tongue. In uttering the compound rear-rank, the difference will be felt in the contraction of the tongue when uttering the first r, its slight protrusion in the second r, and its contraction and tremor in the third r.

85. All the consonants should be sounded with energy and distinctness with the examples, (1) across the page ; (2) vertically, according to the rules in par. 79.

In practising across the page the position of the mouth is similar for each letter, but the action passes from whisper to voice, as P to B.

86. In practising vertically the action begins with the lips and recedes towards the back of the mouth with each successive mark.

87. Practise both ways.

88. Consonants arranged according to the action of the Organs of Speech.

It will be found useful to explain to the pupils the position of the speech organs as each consonant is uttered, and it will be better still if the teacher will direct the pupils first to sound the consonant, and then ask them to observe and explain the action of the organs themselves.

LABIAL OR LIP SOUNDS.

P, pipe. B, bab. M, mum. W, Woe. V, Viv. F, fife.

90.

DENTAL OR TEETH SOUNDS.

T, tat. D, did. Th, thun. Th, thee. Zh, azure. Sh, shush. S, sis. Z, zuz. Ch, etch. J, jug.

PALATE SOUNDS.

K, kik. G, gog. Y, ye.

92.

NASAL SOUNDS.

N, num. Ng, sing. Nk, ink.

93.

ASPIRATE.

H, ha.

94.

LINGUAL OR TONGUE SOUNDS.

EXPLANATION.

95. Labials.—The action is chiefly on the lips, and the utterance is always clearer as the lips are firmly compressed in delivering the sounds. In sounding B, for example, there is a firm compression of the lips, to arrest the escape of the breath; but the compression is only momentary, and the lips are suddenly separated so as to produce a slight whisper finish, like the sound of e in err. This last sound is called a vocule, and should always be heard when b ends a word, as robe.

96. Dentals.—The tongue presses on the teeth or the gums.

97. Palatals.—The tongue presses on the palate.

98. Nasals.—The lips are open ; the tongue presses against the gums above the upper fore-teeth, and the sound issues through the nose. Ng is sounded by drawing back and elevating the tongue against the veil of the palate, so that the sound becomes thoroughly nasal. This will correct the defect of pronouncing singing as singin', and length as lenth.

99. Aspirates.—H is often neglected or misplaced. It is simply a breathing effort. It may be checked by practising the coup de la glotte exercise,*the pupil repeating the word, when the misplaced h is sounded, many times, holding in the breath momentarily and then shooting out the word quickly. When the h is omitted where it should be heard, let the pupil take a breath before the word and then breathe it out. Never rasp the h out.

100. Linguals.—These sounds depend on the action of the tongue, which is raised and the tip pressed gently against the roof of the mouth, touching the ridge of the upper fore-teeth.

CHAPTER. VII.

PRACTICE ON VOWEL SOUNDS.

101. The words in the following table are arranged to agree with the table of vowel sounds in par. 61. The attention of the pupils should therefore be fixed on the vowel sounds which the words illustrate ; and as each vowel is placed before the group of words which form the practice, that vowel should always be sounded in the various ways suggested in par. 70, that is, by inflection and the various forces of the voice :—

I. A as in balm (long).

D

* See Appendix p.—

Palm, calm, father, path, psalm, calf, rather, salve, master, laugh, alms.

II. A as at (short).

Am, ask, grant, plan, glass, ashes, castle, crafty, baffle, imagine, abandon, fantastic.

III. A as all or awe (long).

Hall, fall, pall, call, broad, naught, caught, wall, enthrall, ball, cause, law, yawn.

IV. E as in Eve.

Heed, knee, flee, we, theme, seal, zeal, cheer, meed, ye, he, apotheoses.

V. E in end.

Friend, says, again, bestial, special, breakfast, against, forget, met, wet, wept, net.

VI. E in err.

Erst, earth, mercy, verse, pearl, girl, servant, perfect, terminate, stern, earl.

VII. I as in.

Bid, synod, women, vineyard, charity, docility, universal, eternity, infinite, implicit, illicit, dynasty, privilege, dignity, ability.

In this practice be watchful against the tendency to convert the short i into u. (See par. 68.)

VIII. O as in on.

Bond, yacht, gone, quantity, cost, cough, shone, moth, was, moss.

IX. O as in or.

Orb, form, born, forlorn, adorn, morn.

X. U as in up.

Null, dull, done, blood, young, touch, fulsome, punish, covert, combat, cousin, southern, sovereign, covetous, enough.

XI. U as in bull.

Full, put, push, would, wood, foot, soot, book, pulpit, cushion, woman, wolsey, butcher, ruthless.

XII. Oo as in ooze.

Cool, fool, rule, moon.

102.

COMPOUND VOWELS.

I. A as in gay. = a + e.

Bathe, grange, pay, veins, deign, angel, ancient, inveigh, fatalist, bravado, umbrageous.

II. I as in ice = a + ĭ.

Time, high, sigh, viscount, guide, idyl, isle, mankind, condign, paradisiacal, hypochondriacal, satiety.

III. O as in old, O—oo.

Cope, dome, gold, shew, sew, beau, yeoman, prologue, sojourn, goal.

IV. Ou as in now = a + oo.

Power, our, endow, found, hound, shower, thousand, row.

V. Oi as in joy = awe + ĭ.

Broil, foil, toil, enjoy, alloy, boy, buoy, embroil, coil, astound.

VI. U as in dew = ĭ + oo.

Tune, fume, view, beauty, feudal, duke, duty, dew, jew, pursuit, presume, cubic.

103. Vowel exercises arranged in the order of their formation, and according to their analogy, as recommended by Dr

Hullah :*—Palm, pole, pay, pool, peat, daunt, woe, tale, rue, cheer, master, zone, fail, moon, hear, gape, low, gate, woo, theme.

“The pupil should begin with and often return to the practice of aa (as in balm). Begin with it because it is the easiest, and return to it because experience has shewn it to be the most useful. The practice of aa had best be followed by that of o, and that of o by that of a. Oa had better follow, and e, “incomparably the most difficult, attacked last.”

DR. HULLAH.

104. The following is a test exercise, presenting a miscellaneous collection of vowel sounds. The pupil should be directed to sound the vowels first, then the word. The teacher will find it useful to select other passages from the reading book for practice :—

Group, rude, audacity, prayer, parent, before, field, pier, pool, lake, people, philosophy, am, wonder, matrimony, fume, student, undo, feel, oil, crew, confound, crystalline, idea, concise, diameter, lance, steady, been, busy, bought, asteroid, labor, error, acrimony, facility, obey, monday, elegant.

CHAPTER VIII.

105.

CONSONANT PRACTICE.

105. Pronounce each of the following words :—

- (1.) Slowly taking breath between each word.
- (2.) Rapidly and energetically.
- (3.) In whispers.
- (4.) Never fail to complete the sound of every consonant.

* “The Cultivation of the Speaking Voice.” By John Hullah.

The complete sound is secured by re-opening the mouth and causing the tongue to rest flat at the bottom, when the word is finished and before beginning another ; i.e., restore the vocal organs to their normal state after sounding each word.

106. Breath Consonants (Atonics).

Pity, pulp, peter, paper, fitter, falter, filter, laugh, rough, thin, tent, taller, elk, wash, post, posts, health, height, milk, nymph, strength, call'st, roll'st, heal'st, tost, trusts, straightest, sect, church, shrine.

Here files of pins extend their shining rows,
Puffs, powders, patches, bibles, billet doux,
Abase the city's best good men in meter,
And laugh at peers that put their trust in Peter.

107. Voice Consonants. (Sub-tonics.)

In the words beginning with a voice consonant followed by i or r, take care not to sound a vowel between, as

Bulame for Blame,
Burave " Brave,
Elum " Elm.

Blame, bleed, blow, blest, brave, bread, drain, barb, orb'd, disturb'd, gorg'd, barr'd.

The barbarous Hubert took a bribe
To kill the royal babe.

Bulbs, delve, eggs, stabb'd, builds.

He gave a guinea and he got a groat.
A giddy, giggling girl, her kinsfolk's plague,
Her manners vulgar and her converse vague.

Deadly, adjudged, fatigued.

108. Difficult Double and Triple Consonant Endings.

Wasp, alps, gulfed, ingulfed, tenths, strengths, lengths, ringst, depths, droopst, laughst, asps, helpst, twelfths, attemptst, thinkst, precincts, overwhelmst, sixths, tests, worlds, charmst, robbst, diggst, writhst, hundredths, beggdst, catchdst, actst, liftst, meltst, touchdst, bursts, tasks, grasps, puzzles.

109. Difficult Articulations.

The teacher may increase these exercises to any extent. The object to be kept in view is to give such practice in difficult combinations of letters as will secure a facility and correctness of pronunciation. A selection of hard words presents the best practice to accomplish this important object.

110. The following combinations are taken from A. Melville Bell's "Elocutionary Manual," and, although meaningless, they form an excellent and amusing practice.

111. They should be read first slowly and then very rapidly, but always with the utmost finish of pronunciation:—

112. A paltry portly puppy. Pick pepper peacock. A bad big dog. A big mad dog bit bad Bob. Kate hates tight tapes. Geese cackle, cattle low, crows caw, cocks crow. Kate's baked cakes. Put the pot on the top of the poop. The bleak breeze blighted the bright broom blossoms. A sloppery slippery sleety day. The kitten killed the chicken in the kitchen. She says she shall sew a sheet. The sun shines on the shop signs. A shocking sottish set of men. Such a sash. A shot-silk sash shop. A short soft shot-silk sash. Shilly-shally, silly Sally. It's a shame, Sam; these are the same, Sam. 'Tis all a sham, Sam, and a shame it is to sham so, Sam. They thrust it through the thatch. Thrice the shrew threw the stool. A swan swam over the sea. Swim, swan, swim. Well swam, swan. I snuff shop snuff. Do you snuff shop snuff?

She sells sea shells. A rural ruler. Truly rural. Literally literary. A lucent rubicund rotatory luminary. Lucy likes light literature. A little knitting needle. A menial million. A million minions. A million menial millions. We shall be in an inn in an instant. Don't go, Ann, in an unanimated manner.

113. Laid in the cold ground (not coal ground). Half I see the panting spirit sighs (not spirit's eyes). Be the same in thine own act and valour as thou art in desire (not thy known). Oh the torment of an ever-meddling memory (not a never-meddling). All night I lay an ice drop there (not a nice drop). Would that all difference of sects were at an end (not sex). Goodness centres in the heart (not goodness enters). His crime moved me (not cry). Chaste stars (not tars). She could pain nobody (not pay). Make clean our hearts (not lean). His beard descending swept his aged breast (not beer).

114. Difficult Combinations.

(From Plumptre's "Elocution.")

The ineligibility of the preliminaries is unparalleled.

Such individual irregularities are generally irremediable.

He acted contrary to the peremptory injunctions that were given.

We alienate many by requiring a few with supernumerary gratuities.

Rising simultaneously at the irreverential mention of their leader's name, they swore revenge.

An inalienable eligibility of election, which was of an authority that could not be disputed, rendered the interposition of his friends altogether supererogatory.

SECTION III.

CHAPTER I.

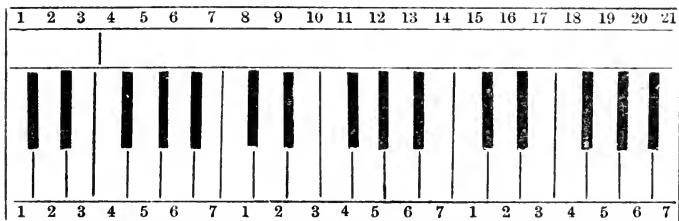

Modulation.

115. The MODULATIONS of the speaking voice consist of PITCH and INFLECTION.

116. The pitch of the voice varies as it is high or low; and as these variations embrace all the steps of the musical scale, that is, the seven notes of the gamut, it is a most useful and necessary exercise for cultivating the ear and for acquiring facility in executing all the variations of pitch to practise the pupils on the musical scale. This practice is simple, and requires very little musical knowledge either in teacher or pupil. The compass or extent of the speaking voice rarely passes beyond seven notes—that is, seven gradations of sound. As the voice moves onwards in speech its variations are few, unless the speech be uttered under the influence of strong passion. But even then the variations are not so frequent nor so great as in music. In music the voice will rise and fall incessantly in every sound made, and sometimes the variation will be that of an octave or more—that is, will leap upwards or downwards over seven notes. In speech the changes are gradual. Many words, a whole series of thoughts, may be uttered on the same level, and when the variation is requisite it rarely extends over more than two or three notes. This explanation refers to what is called change of pitch. When the variation is applied to inflection, there is no interruption between the passage of the voice from a lower to a higher sound, as in music. It is concrete—that is, continuous; while in music it is discrete—that is, broken up into parts.

117. As the inflection, however, is derived from pitch—that is, from the gradations of notes—some knowledge of pitch is necessary. If the teacher can start these notes with his voice, commencing with such a low note as he can conveniently sound, and if he can then with any degree of correctness rise a note higher, and another, and another, until he has counted seven; and if he can then descend in the same manner; he has accomplished almost all that is necessary to train his pupils in the variations of pitch. If his voice and ear—for the ear forms a very important element in the practice—are so dull that he cannot master these preparatory exercises, a very simple musical instrument will aid him. If he has access to a piano, the following diagram and explanation of its parts will serve the purpose:—

118. The Key Board of a Piano.

The white keys are set off in series of sevens, with the black keys behind them. No. 1 and No. 2 may be known on the piano by having behind them the two black keys, followed by an open space without a black key; then follow three more black keys. Now, if the student strikes the first of the three white keys in front of the two black keys he will get a sound which commences the series of a gamut. If that sound be too high or too low for his voice, he must descend or ascend until, as far as he can judge, he has struck the proper note. Let him do his best many times, listening carefully to make his voice accord with this note of the piano. Notes Nos. 1 and 2 are full tones; when he passes to 3 and 4 a semitone connects them. All the black keys are semitones ; but as No. 3 is a semitone it needs no black key. All the student then has to do is to strike the white key immediately below the pair of black keys, and from that key to practise seven notes up and down.*

119. The following scale is recommended for drilling a class in the modulations of Pitch. The teacher may write it on a black board and lead with his own voice. He should, however, endeavour to sound the tone as in speaking rather than as in music :—

SCALE FOR PRACTICE IN PITCH AND TONE.

Directions.

I. Ascend slowly, dwelling on each note while you beat four counts and two counts. Take a quiet breath where the rest is marked.

II. Descend in the same manner.

III. Repeat up and down from four to six times. Let the voice swell towards the centre of the sound, but avoid all force.

IV. Observe all previous rules for the management of the voice in this practice. Open the mouth well, and let all the breath poured out pass into pure voice.

* These hints are intended for the teacher.

Reading Gamut.

120. The practice of the last exercise will prepare the pupils for the modulations necessary to expressive reading. The next exercise changes the practice from the simple vowel sound "ah" to sentences. The object of these two exercises is to overcome the monotony of school reading and to acquire skill in varying the pitch at will and according to the nature of the sentiment and sentences. Poetry is better than prose for this practice.

121. The scale on p. 44 illustrates the method, and will serve for any kind of composition.

EXPLANATION.

1. Let the lowest key-note be sounded. Then read the lowest line on that pitch.

2. Strike the next key-note and read the next line on that level.

3. Advance in this manner to the highest step of the gamut ; then descend.

4. Commence again at the lowest step, and read alternate steps, taking care to sound the key-note of each step to be read.

5. Descend in the same manner.

6. Give every variation of pitch—that is, give the lowest, then the fourth, then the seventh, and so on—to acquire facility in changing the pitch at will.

It is quite enough to practise within the compass of the seven pitches, and the pupil should never ascend so high as to convert the voice into a disagreeable and unnatural tone like a scream (falsetto).

Gamut for Varying the Pitch of the Speaking Voice.

10th.	E— mi.	John, get up, you lazy boy.	Falsetto.
9th or 2nd, full tone.	D— re.	In the lost battle borne down by the flying, Where mingles war's rattle with groans of the dying.	High wailing tone like a chant.
8th (octave), full tone.	C— do.	Up, comrades ! up ! in Rokeby's halls Ne'er be it said our courage falls !	Very high, for joy or alarm.
7th pitch, semitone.	B— si.	Oh mercy ! dispel Yon sight, that it freezes my spirit to tell.	High, for pathos.
6th pitch, full tone.	A— la.	To arms ! to arms ! to arms ! they cry, Grasp the shield, and draw the sword ; Lead us to Philippi's lord, Let us conquer him, or die.	High tone.
5th pitch, full tone.	G— sol.	Come one—Come all ! This rock shall fly From its firm base as soon as I.	Bold and domi- nant tone.
4th pitch, full tone.	F— fa.	Oh, how wretched Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favors.	Grave tone.
3rd pitch, semitone.	E— mi.	'Tis the eternal law that where guilt is, Sorrow shall answer it.	Pathos and so- lemnity.
2nd pitch, full tone.	D— re.	Oh look, my son, upon yon sign Of the Redeemer's grace Divine.	Reverential so- lemnity.
1st pitch, full tone.	C— do.	If this same were a churchyard where we stand, And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs.	Deepest tone of awe.

CHAPTER II.

INFLECTION.

Difference of Inflection from Pitch.

122. Pitch.—When we sing a tune the voice passes from one note to another—from low to high, and high to low—with a distinct interruption between each sound. This illustrates the change of pitch. Sometimes, however, the voice moves from one note to another without any interruption, called a slur. This conveys an idea of Inflection.

123. Inflection is a continuous slur or movement from one note to another, without any break between. It is heard in very earnest questioning or denial, and especially in questions and denials of children, whose flexible voices present the best examples of inflection, and are therefore the easiest and best for training in the music of speech.

124. In practising the following scale, the pupils must sound the lowest note, and pass to the next without pause or breath. They are then to commence again with the lowest, and continue the sound until the third note is reached. In musical terms the voice slurs from a first to a second; then from a first to a third; then from a first to a fourth; and so on until the sound has slurred over an octave, or from the lowest note to the eighth above it.

125. Next commence with the highest note of the scale and slur one note downward; commence again and slur two, then three notes, until the voice has run down from the highest to the lowest note of the scale.

PRACTICE IN INFLECTIONS.

126. In this practice there must be no break or false note, no jumping from one to another, but throughout a soft and gentle flowing of tone. Untrained voices, especially those of adults, will often fail in this exercise, and the effort will be marked by breaks and false notes. In all these cases teacher and pupil should patiently recommence and steadily renew the effort until a pure inflection can be accomplished.

127. If the teacher can use the violin he may guide his pupils with great correctness. "When the bow is drawn across the string of a violin, and the finger at the same time gradually moved with continued pressure on the string from its lower attachment to any distance upward, a mewing sound, if I may so call it, is heard. This movement of pitch on the violin is termed a slide."—(Dr. Rush.)

CHAPTER III.

QUALITY AND FORCE.

I28. A voice of good quality is clear, pure, and musical as a bell. It is free from huskiness and gruffness on the one hand, or harsh loudness on the other. It is not heard as if proceeding from the nose, nor half mingled with breath as if the speaker were gasping with exhaustion. It issues round and full-toned through the well-opened mouth, and is ever modulated and toned to the nature of the sentiment it utters. It is soft and tender, and full of sweetness and pathos; it is solemn and flowing as the tones of an organ, in prayer and counsel and eloquence and sublime poetry; and in wrath or great vehemence it still exhibits purity, but marked by great power and grandeur.

I29. A voice of this kind is rare, because no attention is paid to its culture; but if the training commences in youth and the practice is regular and systematic, all voices may acquire great excellence and power of expression. Let the practice, if possible, be daily. Ten minutes a day would in the course of a few months produce the best results. This practice consists in sounding the vowels, especially ah, on the scale. Par. 119.

I30. The following conditions should also be carefully observed:—

I. Inhale through the nostrils.

II. Acquire the habit of keeping the mouth closed when sleeping, walking, or silent.

III. Never speak before the lungs have been moderately filled, and keep up the supply by constantly and frequently breathing.

IV. Raise the soft palate and widen the back of the mouth.

V. Stand erect, with head elevated and shoulders thrown back.

VI. When driving out a sound, especially with great force, keep the head and shoulders still, almost rigid, but not stiff, and let the effort of expelling the sound be made by the muscles of the abdomen and the diaphragm. Untrained pupils will at first, jerk out the head and commit other ungraceful acts which must at once and entirely be checked.

131. The practice should be chiefly with the vowel a (ah), and when facility of practice has been acquired, the pupil should take up the other vowels, always commencing with the most open (a) and advancing to the narrowest and closest (e), as in the table on page 46.

I. Send out a powerful stream of sound, directing the voice to some distinct object, as if shouting—dwelling a considerable time on the sound hoy.

II. Repeat this effort at least six times.

THE OROTUND VOICE.

132. This is the grandest quality of the speaking voice. It is artificial—the result of cultivation; but when acquired it can be longer sustained, with less fatigue and with better effect, than any other quality of voice.

133. Let the pupil conceive what is done when we yawn or gape heartily and loudly. The mouth is opened very wide, so as almost to dislocate the jaws, and is held a moment in that position; then we gape aloud, and if we listen we shall hear, as it were in the middle of the gape, a full vocal sound. Now, this will help us to fix the mouth for the practice of the orotund voice, for if that vocal sound heard in the centre of the gape be forcibly continued and freed from the aspiration which commences the general yawn, we are engaged in practising the orotund voice.

134 Children frequently, in the loud expression of natural joy or passion, when the voice is forced forth in a clear loud singing tone, give examples of the orotund quality; and when adults are deeply moved by courage or delight or hatred, and yet control their feelings, the voice attains its purest quality and often becomes orotund.

135. Practice for the Orotund Voice.

I. Let the pharynx, or back of the mouth, be well expanded
The tongue depressed.

The uvula raised.

The top of the windpipe (larynx) depressed.

The breath or voice be directed in a vertical stream, with greater boldness and firmness than in common usage.

II. Observing these regulations, turn to the gamut, p. 42, and practise up and down with the full sound ah.

III. When facility has been acquired with ah, take the other vowels in the order indicated in paragraph 103 ; as,

ah, o, ā, oo, ee,

first sounding these vowels several times separately, then continuously.

IV. After good practice on the vowels, take any of the words, the most sonorous first, in par. 101-2, and practise with them.

V. Finally, read the following passages (1) by monosyllables ; (2) by words ; pausing and taking breath frequently after each word ; and when each separate word can be delivered in this voice, try to read the whole passage naturally in the same tone :—

High | on | a | throne | of | roy|al | state | which | far
Out|shone | the | wealth | of | Or|mus | and | of | Ind,
Or | where | the | gor|geous | East | with | rich|est | hand
Showers | on | her | kings | bar|bar|ic, | pearl | and | gold,
Sa|tan | ex|al|ted | sat.

Any other similar passage will serve the purpose.

136. "The pupils will often be able to give the orotund quality to vowels and syllables; but when attempting to utter a sentence the colloquial tone will return. Continued practice, however, with a gradual increase in the number of syllables, will render the uninterrupted expiration of the orotund as easy as that of common speech."—Dr. Rush.

137. These exercises are not necessarily low. They may be practised on every pitch of the voice.

CHAPTER IV.

Force or Stress.

138. Force or stress means the strength or loudness of a voice. Height of voice means elevation of pitch. Loudness means the power exerted to make ourselves heard.

139. Force does not, however, mean great shouting, but such necessary and proper energy as the nature of the sentiment demands. A passage marked by calmness, or gentleness of sentiment, may have expressions demanding comparative energy, and the various forms of force applied to these expressions will give the necessary effect to make the reading a just interpretation of the thought. When, however, the passage is dramatic or oratorical, and embodies a powerful emotion, the grandest effect can be given to it by a proper exercise of stress. The student must also understand the great distinction between mere vulgar shouting and that force of voice which is powerful and full of energy, yet is free from harshness or coarseness. We often hear powerful voices which only create a painful and wearying impression; but when the power is directed by art, its effect is always impressive and delightful.

140. An improper and unscientific exercise of force often marks the delivery of public speakers, and conduces more than any other cause to injure the vocal organs and often to ruin them for life. On the other hand, however, proper discipline and culture develop their power and improve the general health.

141. In practising the exercises in Force it is important that the pupils should always commence with moderate energy, until ease and correctness of execution have been acquired. They may then commence with the most powerful forms and end with the milder ones.

142. When practising the energetic form, all tendencies to violence should be checked. If the pupils cough, the throat is irritated and undue violence has been committed. When this happens, they should rest, or change to some other exercise.

143. There are three leading forms of stress, viz. :

1. Radical Stress.
2. Median Stress.
3. Vanishing Stress.

RADICAL STRESS.

144. I. This term is used because the force of the voice is loudest and greatest at the beginning or root (radix) of the sound. It is sudden and quick, and the opposite of a lazy drawl. The breath is held "barred and accumulated" for a moment, and then sent out suddenly with a clear, distinct, and cutting force. It gives liveliness to the delivery, and is adapted to all cheerful and joyous expressions, and when exercised with the fullest power, to words of command or alarm.

145. Suppose this effort of voice could be pictured, it would have this form :—

Arm ! Arm ! Arm !

146. Practice.

1. Sound ah quick and loud six times.
2. Sound ah quick but not so loud six times.

3. Sound ah—ah—ah—ah rapidly, as in a ringing laugh.

4. Sound all the vowels on p. 22, par. 61, in the same manner as (1) (2) (3).

5. Speak the following passage with energy, but giving the radical stress only to the words in italics and heavy black faced type

PASSIONATE RADICAL :—

Up! comrades, up! in Rokeby's halls,
Ne'er be it said our courage falls.

UNIMPASSIONED BUT CHEERFUL :—

Oh, then I see Queen Mab hath been with you.

She is the fancy's midwife, and she comes

In shape no bigger than an agate stone

On the fore-finger of an alderman,

Drawn by a team of little atomies

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep.

ALARM :—

“While throng the citizens with terror dumb,
Or whispering with white lips—

‘The foe, they come, they come!’ ”

HATRED AND CONTEMPT—FULLEST POWER OF THE RADICAL :—

“You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate.”

As reek o' the common fens,—whose loves I prize

As the dead carcasses of unburied men,

That do corrupt my air,—“I banish you.”

The radical stress is synonymous with “attack” in music.

MEDIAN STRESS.

147. The voice begins (piano) softly, swells as it advances (forte), and then tapers off to (piano) softness.

It is synonymous with the "swell" in music

It may be pictured thus :—

< > < >
Ah, ah.

148. Practise on the gamut, par. 119, with ah and then with the long vowels. This quality of voice is the most important of all to cultivate, as it is most demanded on all solemn delivery.

149. Besides the above initial practice, select the most solemn passages in the Readers, Wolsey's Farewell, Clarence's Dream, Richard's Despair, etc. ; the Psalms and Prophecies of Isaiah ; the xvth of I. Corinthians, and Paradise Lost, Books I. and II.

150. "The median stress sets forth intensity of voice with greater dignity and elegance than all the other forms of force."
—Dr. Rush.

151. Caution.—The teacher must guard against a common fault of swelling upon every word, which when carried to excess is called "mouthing." Sometimes, too, the voice passes into a chant or sing-song. The special force is given to leading words, nouns, verbs and adjectives.

VANISHING STRESS.

152. In this exercise the force of the voice is increased to its termination. It is the opposite of the radical stress. It is similar to the "pressure" tone in music ; but it ends more abruptly. In the practice the pupils should be directed to begin the sound ah gently, and then as the voice grows in force terminate suddenly with an energetic push of the breath—that is, with a sudden impulse of the abdominal muscles and the diaphragm.

153. This force has been compared to a hiccough, and to the "bark of a dog threatening to bite," or to the tone of a peevish child saying, I [<]wont, I [<]shant.

I wont.

154. Practise with the vowels as usual. Read the following passages, giving the vanishing force to the marked words :—

[<] [<] [<]
Thou slave! thou wretch, thou coward,

Thou little valiant, great in villany!

Thou ever strong upon the stronger side,

Thou fortune's champion!"

And Douglas, more, I tell thee here

Even in thy pitch of pride,

Here in thy hold, thy vassals near,

I tell thee—thou'rt defied.

And, if thou said'st I am not peer

To any lord in Scotland here—

Lowland or highland, far or near,

Lord Angus, thou hast lied.

DERIVATIVE FORMS OF STRESS.

155. The derivative forms of stress are termed—

1. Thorough stress.
2. Compound stress.
3. Intermittent stress, or tremor.

156. THOROUGH STRESS.—This is the combination of the three modes : radical, median, and vanishing stress. The voice begins, continues, and ends with the same energy. It is the natural tone of shouting to call attention:*

Ship ahoy !

Fire ! Fire ! Fire !

“ Princes, potentates !

Warriors, the flowers of heaven !

Once yours, now lost !

Awake ! Arise ! or be for ever fallen !”

“ Rejoice, ye men of Angiers, ring your bells !

King John, your King and England's, doth approach ;

Open your gates and give the victor way !”

157. All the words of these passages demand the thorough stress, but the greatest force is given to the words in italics and black type.

158. Note.—The teacher should understand that this is to be an energetic and vigorous shouting exercise. The pupils should stand ; the chest must be expanded and well filled with air ; the mouth well opened ; and while violence must always be avoided, the utmost force of voice is demanded to give effect to the practice. Performed under these regulations, the exercise is invigorating and agreeable, and calculated to give great strength to the lungs and volume to the voice.

COMPOUND STRESS.

159. This is the union of the radical and vanishing stress on the same word, syllable, and even letter. It is as if we started

* “ With like timorous accent and dire yell,
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.”—Othello.

the sound of ah with the sudden force of the radical stress, then continuing the sound relaxed slightly and momentarily, then resumed and increased the force, and terminated with the energy of the vanishing stress. Pictured thus :

Ah.

160. The compound stress is demanded in the utterance of hatred, sarcasm, mockery, contempt, and similar feelings.

“ Out on him ! ” quoth false Sextus,

“ Will not the villain drown ? ”

“ Gone to be married ! Gone to swear a peace !

It is not so ; thou hast mis-spoke, mis-heard.

Be well advised ; tell o’er thy tale again.

It cannot be. Thou dost but say ’tis so.

INTERMITTENT STRESS, OR TREMOR.

161. This effort of the voice causes it to tremble. “ It is that particular vibration in the throat called, in common language, gurgling. ” — Dr. Rush. It is stress, or force of voice, but the force is broken into tittles, or points. Laughing and crying are examples of this tremor. It expresses the feeble and broken utterance of age, of great sorrow, and sometimes of intense excitement. Apply the tremor to the italic words.

THE TREMOR OF AGE.

Pity the sorrows of a poor old man,

Whose trembling limbs have borne him to your door,
Whose days are dwindled to the shortest span ;

Oh, give relief and Heaven will bless your store !

AGE AND EXCITEMENT.

(Barbara Freitchie.)

- (Firm) Quick as it fell from the broken staff,
 Dame Barbara snatched the silken scarf ;
 She lean'd far out on the window sill,
 And shook it forth with a royal will.
- (Tremor) "Shoot, if you must, this old grey head,
 But spare your country's flag," she said.

YOUTH.—TREMOR, WITH PASSION.

Miranda. O ! I have suffer'd
 With those that I saw suffer ! a brave vessel,
 Who had no doubt some noble creatures in her,
Dash'd all to pieces. O, the cry did knock
 Against my very heart ! Poor souls, they perish'd.
 Had I been any god of power, I would
 Have sunk the sea within the earth, or e'er
 It should the good ship so have swallow'd, and
 The fraughting souls within her.—The Tempest.

REVIEW PRACTICE.

162. Let the teacher name the stress, then give the example, followed by the pupils.

Sound awe in each stress thus :

Radical,	awe.	Thorough,	awe.
Median,	awe.	Compound,	awe.
Vanishing,	awe.	Tremor,	awe.

Practise in a similar way on the table of words, par. 69.

SECTION IV.

CHAPTER I.

PRINCIPLES OF EXPRESSIVE READING.

163. The object of this section is to explain the method of applying the cultivated voice to the correct delivery of thought and feeling. After the previous drill through which the pupil has passed, he is supposed to have acquired the power of modulating his voice and the quickness and correctness of ear by which he can distinguish the necessary modulations. The section that follows will show when to use these acquired powers, so as to make the voice a true interpreter of the thought.

The best rule for the guidance of the student is to understand and to realize to his own mind the passage he is to read, and then to give the appropriate tones. This, however, depends upon the imagination as much as the understanding; and as there is only one way to read any passage correctly and naturally, and few minds are quick to appreciate and conceive the true nature of an emotion or a thought, the pupil must at first be guided by the literal form of the passage. Hence the analysis of the sentences is the best guide to their proper delivery.

CHAPTER II.

RHETORICAL PAUSES.

164. There are two kinds of pauses in reading—the Grammatical Pause and the Rhetorical Pause.

The Grammatical Pause is indicated by the common stops—the comma, the semicolon, the colon, the full stop, the notes of interrogation and of admiration, and the dash. It is not necessary to explain these stops, but in no reading exercise ought they to be neglected. The old rule of counting one, two, three, four, as a measure of the time for stopping, is of very little use excepting as a measure of the comparative duration of the pause. The true length of a pause must always depend on the nature of the composition ; and therefore no fixed rules can be given.

165. The Rhetorical Pause depends upon the construction of the sentence ; hence the importance of analysis.

General Principle.

The sentence is formed of two principal members :—The SUBJECT and the PREDICATE. These members again may be enlarged and extended by attributes and adjuncts, and where these subdivisions terminate, there must be a rhetorical pause.

166. Hence the following

RULES FOR RHETORICAL PAUSE :

Mark || short pause.

Mark ||| long pause.

I. Pause after the logical subject if it have attributes.

II. Pause after the logical predicate if the verbs be intransitive ; pause between the object of the verb and the extensions of time, place, manner, and cause, if the verb be transitive.

III. If the subject have attributes, participial, prepositional, nouns in apposition, etc., pause before and after them.

IV. When a sentence is inverted, pause after the inverted member.

V. Pause before prepositions and relative pronouns, before and after parenthetic clauses, before the infinitive mood, and wherever there is an ellipsis.

It will be seen that Rule V. is only a derivative of the previous rules.

EXAMPLES.

167. Rule I.

A thousand hearts|| beat happily. The universe at large|| would suffer as little in its splendour and variety by the destruction of our planet, as the verdure and sublime magnitude of a forest|| would suffer by the fall of a single leaf.—Chalmers.

Thus to relieve the wretched|| was his pride,

And even his failings|| leaned to Virtue's side.—Goldsmith.

Rule II.

The dungeon glowed||

A moment|| as in sunshine, then was dark ;

Again|| a flood of white flame|| fills the cell.

Rule IV.

Within a windowed niche of that high hail ||

Sate Brunswick's fated chieftain.

Low lies the head|| that was once crowned with honour.
Silent|| is the tongue|| to whose accents|| we surrendered up the soul.

Chained|| in the market place|| he stood.

Then shook|| the hills|| with thunder riven,

Then rushed|| the steed|| to battle driven,

And louder|| than the bolts of heaven||

Far flashed|| the red artillery.

168. The following passage is miscellaneous, but contains examples of all the rules :—

“ Flung|| into life|| in the midst of a revolution|| that quickened every energy of a people|| who acknowledged no superior, he commenced his course|| a stranger|| by birth, a scholar|| by charity

169. Caution.—While the rhetorical pause is indispensable to good reading, the pupil must be warned against making the pause too marked and too long. It must be a natural and momentary resting place to distinguish the grammatical divisions of the sentence. In this way the rhetorical pause aids the exercise of grammatical analysis. The rhetorical pauses also are the proper places for breathing.

CHAPTER III.

Inflections.

PRINCIPLES OF INFLECTION.

170. All rules of inflection are derived from two leading principles.

I. When the sense of a passage is incomplete, and dependent upon a sentence or phrase that follows, the last word of the dependent passage takes a rising inflection.

II. When the sense of a passage is complete in itself, and does not depend for its meaning upon any word, phrase, or sentence that follows, the last word of that passage takes a falling inflection.

171. The following sentence on page 193, Fifth Reader, will serve as an example :

“ Her attendants, during this conversation, were bathed in tears ; and, though overawed by the presence of the two earls, with difficulty suppressed their anguish.”—Hume. The sentence ending at “tears” is independent ; hence “tears” takes a falling inflection. “Attendants” and “conversation,” being dependent and referential to what follows, take the rising inflection. The sentence that follows is also independent. "Over-awed by the presence of the two earls" refers to what follows, and "earls" takes the rising inflection; while as "anguish" completes the sense as well as the sentence, it takes the falling inflection.

Further Examples.

Near yonder copse, where once the garden smiled, (dependent sent.)

And still where many a garden flower grows wild, (depend. sent.)

There, where a few torn shrubs the place disclose, (dep. sent.)

The village preacher's modest mansion ròse. (prin. indep. sent.)

Goldsmith.

In that great cloister's stillness and seclúision, (dep. phrase.)

By guardian angels léd, (dep. phrase.)

Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollútion, (dep. phrase.)

She lives (prin. sent.) whom we call dead, (completed sent.)

And though, at times, impetuous with emótion, (dep. phrase.)

And anguish long suppressed, (dep. phrase.)

The swelling heart heaves, moaning like the ocean, (dep. adv. sent.)

That cannot be at rést, (dep. adj. sent.)

We will be pàtient, and assuage the féeling
(prin. sent., but referential to the next sentence.)

We may not wholly stáy: (dependent, but complete.)

Thus it will be seen that the analysis of the sentence is the key to its proper inflection.

172. Rules for the rising inflection derived from principle I. enunciated above :

I. The subject of the sentence, all dependent sentences followed by the principal sentence, all principal sentences followed by qualifying clauses to which they refer, and all extensions and modifications of the predicate when they precede the predicate, take a rising inflection.

II. All words of appeal, i. e. nominatives of address, and exhortations, end with a rising inflection.

Example :—

“Ye crags and péaks (appeal), I’m with you once again” (complete).

“Hide thy face from my síns, and blot out all my iniquities” (exhortation).

“Awake, voice of sweet sóng. Awake, my heart, awáke ; green vales and icy cliffs, all join my hymn.”

III. All questions beginning with verbs, or that can be answered by “yes” or “no,” take a rising inflection.*

“Hast thou not knówn, hast thou not héard, that the everlasting Gód, the Lórd, the Créator of the ends of the éarth, fainteth not, neither is wéary?”

Note.—Observe that words in apposition take the same inflection as the principal word. Hence in the above, Lord and Creator—earth, have a rising inflection like God.

IV. Negative sentences have a rising inflection in the part denied.

It is not my faúlt.

* See Appendix.

It is not to small portions of time, not to a few yéars, not to a few generátions, not to a few áges, that our speculations are here limited; they embrace eternity.

173. In all the above subordinate rules, the student will see incompleteness.

Thus an appeal partakes of the nature of a question, and a negative statement seems to be incomplete until the opposite affirmative statement is given.

"It is not my fault," means "it is somebody else's."

174. The second principle has also its derivatives.

Rules for the Falling Inflection.

I. All dependent as well as independent sentences, when they end a passage, take a falling inflection.

II. All commands, threats, and denunciations take a falling inflection.

"Hålt!" "Mårch on!"

"On! òn! you noble English."

"Must I bid twice? Hence, vårlets, fly!"

"Rise, rise ye wild tempests, and còver his flight."

Hòme! hòme! you idle dòlts! Get you hòme,

You blòcks, you stònes, you worsè than senseless things.

"Wòe unto them that call evil góod, and good èvil; that put darkness for líght, and líght for darkness; that put bitter for swéet, and swéet for bitter."

III. All sentences expressive of undoubted truth, or conviction, even if negative in form, take the falling inflection.

"Though I should dle with thèe, yet I will not dèny thèe."

God is not a màn, that he should lìe ; neither the son of man, that he should repènt.

IV. In a series of independent sentences, each sentence takes a falling inflection excepting the penultimate one.

“Charity suffereth long and is kìnd ; charity envieth nòt ; charity vaunteth not itself ; is not easily puffed ùp ; doth not behave itself unsèemly ; seeketh not her òwn ; is not easily próvoked (penult.) ; thinketh no èvil.”

V. Antithetical forms take opposite inflections, but each expression is subject to the preceding principles.

“Dryden is read with frequent astónishmént ; and Pope with perpetual delight.”—“They póor, I rìch ; they bég, I gíve ; they láck, I tènd ; they píne, I lìve.

CIRCUMFLEX INFLECTIONS.

175. Circumflex Inflections are a combination of the two leading inflections. Sometimes the voice moves down and up, and sometimes up and down in an unbroken continuous wave. Hence they are termed circumflex, rising or falling as they end with a rise or fall.

176. Circumflex inflections do not depend on the form of the sentence for their use, so much as on the emotion they are intended to express, and therefore the analysis of the sentence is not a sufficient guide.

177. The emotions expressed by the circumflex inflection are irony, or double meaning, doubt, mockery, rebuke, reproach, wonder, &c.

Rising Circumflex.

178. The voice slides down, then up, on the same word.

“It is vastly easy for you, Mistress Vial, who have always, as everybody knows, set yourself up above me,—it is vastly easy for you, I say, to accuse other people of laziness."

"How is your patient, Doctor?"

"Well, he is better." (Doubt.)

Observe that this tone implies that he is still in danger; a decided falling inflection over "better" would convey certainty and satisfaction.

"Hume said he would go twenty miles to hear Whitefield preach." That is, he would go no distance to hear a common preacher, but only Whitefield.

Rise and Fall.

179. The voice slides up, and then down :

"None dared withstand him to his face,
But one sly maiden spoke aside :

The little wretch is evil eyed ;

Her mother only killed a cow,

Or witched a churn, or dairy pan ;

But she, forsooth, must charm a man."

180. Combination of both Forms.

"Gone to be married ! Gone to swear a peace !

False blood to false blood join'd. Gone to be friends !

Shall Louis have Blanche, and Blanche these provinces ?

It cannot be,—thou dost but say 'tis so."

“Cry aloud, for he is a god. Either he is talking, or he is on a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked.”

No doubt ye are the people, and wisdom will die with you.

181. The Monotone.

Monotone is a level tone, with as little inflection as possible. The laws of inflection apply in this practice the same as in the preceding examples ; but the inflections are very slight and the tone is lengthened. There is a danger in exercising the monotone of passing into chanting. In chanting there is an entire absence of monotone ; it is uniformly one level tone, excepting where the pitch is changed.

182. The monotone is solemn and level like the tolling of a bell, but each word will involuntarily end with a very slight slide up or down. This is the law of speech, and distinguishes its music from that of song.

Read the following and similar solemn passages on as level a tone as possible :—

— — — — —
Holy, holy, Lord God of Sabaoth.

— — — — —
The-cloud capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,

— — — — —
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,

— — — — —
Yea, all which it inherit shall dissolve,

— — — — —
And, like the unsubstantial pageant faded,

— — — — —
Leave not a rack behind.

Mechanical Practice.

183. A good reader should be able to give any necessary inflection at will and without hesitation, and the following mechanical practice will be useful to train the ear to acquire this power.

(The habit of children when reading is always to "drop" the voice when they stop for any purpose, without regard to the sense; and another habit, shown in reading hymns or the Scriptures, is to give a rising inflection at the end of a verse, where the sense would require a falling inflection.)

184. Practise as follows:—

I. Let each pupil in a class read one line of a lesson only, and then stop, but end with the same inflection that would be used if the next line had to be read. Thus in the Fifth Book, p. 193, let the first pupil read—

"Her attendants during this conversation were bathed in—" Here the reader must stop; but he reads "in" with a rising inflection as if he were going to say "tears." Immediately the second reader takes up the next line, beginning with "tears"; but as "tears" ends the sentence, it takes a falling inflection. The second reader continues "tears; and though overawed by the presence of the two earls,"—here the sense is incomplete; but as "earls" ends the second line, the reader stops for the next to take his part. "Earls," like "in," takes a rising inflection, but habit is so strong that the majority of readers, knowing they are to stop at the end of each line, will "drop the voice."

II. Let the class read simultaneously, and give to every word in the first line a rising inflection. Before they commence the second line, let the teacher call out "fall;" then let the class read every word with a falling inflection.

The teacher after a little practice may vary the exercise, giving the word of change as he pleases: "Rise," "Fall," "Circumflex rising," "Circumflex falling."

The exercise is purely mechanical, but will be found to make the pupils in a short time expert in the practice.

CHAPTER IV.

Pitch.

185. The frequent practice of modulating the voice by the rules of Pitch will be the best corrective of that unvarying and monotonous style of reading so common to the school room, and, as a consequence, to the delivery of most public speakers.

186. Practise the pupils frequently on the reading gamut, with all its variations, p. 44.

187. The teacher should endeavour to secure from all, the pitch intended to be struck, and to secure uniformity in such pitch.

188. When a pupil from defect of ear cannot strike the proper pitch, he should stop reading, listen and try again. Unless there be absolute deafness, a few trials of this kind will be followed by success. The following practice will prepare for more difficult exercises:—

189. Take any passage of poetry, and direct the class to read one or more lines in the pitch named by the teacher, who calls out "High," "Low," "Middle," as he pleases. The class, at the word of command, instantly changes the pitch to high, low, or middle, as directed.

Example.

- LOW. First Fear, his hand its skill to try,
Amid the chords, bewildered, laid ;
- MIDDLE. And back recoiled, he knew not why,
Even at the sound himself had made.
- HIGH. Next Anger rushed, his eyes on fire,
In lightnings own'd his secret stings ;
- VERY HIGH. With one rude clash he struck the lyre,
And swept with hurried hands its strings.
- VERY LOW. With woeful measure, wan Despair,
Low sullen sounds, his grief beguiled,
A solemn, strange, and mingled air,
'Twas sad by fits,
- HIGHER. — by starts 'twas wild.

Principles of Modulation.

(According to the analysis of the sentence.)

THE SIMPLE SENTENCE.

191. The subject and predicate are delivered in a higher pitch than qualifying and modifying phrases. But when contrast and distinction are expressed, then the qualifying words that mark the contrast or distinction take a higher pitch.

192.

Examples of the Subject.

“Becket's death caused great consternation.”

Here “death” is the cause of the consequence, and is the leading word.

“A cheerful disposition lightens labour.”

Here there is contrast : not any disposition, but a cheerful one.

The same rules serve for attributes.

“A man of virtue is trusted even by his enemies.”

Not any man, but (contrast) one of virtue.

“Wisdom, a crown and ornament both to young and old, is never to be despised.”

The explanatory phrase does not distinguish, it only explains ; hence wisdom is the leading word.

“Born to inherit the most illustrious monarchy in the world, and early united to the object of her choice, the amiable princess, happy in herself and joyful in her future prospects, little anticipated the fate that was so soon to overtake her.”

193. As numeral adjectives distinguish, they take precedence of the noun.

“There were twenty men killed.” “There were nine hundred men wounded.”

Note.—Vulgar expression always gives emphasis to “hundred” rather than the number of hundreds in such cases as the above.

The Predicate.

194. The verb has a higher pitch and stronger emphasis than the modifying words.

“The corn is sown by the husbandman, nourished by the rains and the light and the heat of the sun, ground by the miller, and eaten by the people.”

195. When, however, the verb is transitive, the object must have prominence :

“Becket’s death caused great consternation.”

196. So also when the copula is used, its modifying word or predicate takes the higher pitch.

“ Man is mortal.”

197. When there are direct and indirect objects, the indirect has precedence of the direct in pitch.

“ She made him her heir.”

“ We took him for a philosopher.”

“ The fire reduced the house to ashes.”

Note.—Whenever the speaker would give a preference to any other word than the one which comes under the law of analysis, it would be because arbitrary emphasis would justify the preference. (See Emphasis, par. 214). Thus by the rule we read:—“ Brutus accused Cæsar of ambition.” But if the question were, “ Who was guilty of ambition, Cæsar or Antony ?” then the reading would be, “ Brutus accused Cæsar of ambition.” Whenever the modifying phrases or words are intended for contrast or distinction, they take precedence of the other words.

He fought most bravely of all.

He died from hunger.

THE COMPLETE SENTENCE.

198. GENERAL RULE.—The principal sentence takes precedence of all subordinate sentences. If it be delivered in the middle pitch or dominant tone, the subordinate should be given in about a tone lower.

Principal and Adjective Sentences.

“ The enemy—that waiteth for all occasions to work our ruin—hath found it harder to overthrow an humble sinner than a proud saint.”—Hooker.

199. In reading the above and the following examples, the passages in italics are given in the same pitch, and higher than the subordinate sentence. Thus in the above, "the enemy" is given in the middle pitch, that is, half way between the lowest and highest note the reader can sound ; when the adjective clause is read, the voice must make a slight descent and continue and end at that pitch ; but the reader must remember the pitch in which "the enemy" was delivered, and assume it when the predicate "hath found" and all that follows is spoken. In this manner the voice indicates the principal and subordinate sentences.

The noun sentence below that follows "Methought" is read as high as the principal sentence. Par. 204.

200. Principal and Subordinate Sentences.

"As we passed along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,
Methought that Gloster stumbled, and in falling
Struck me, that thought to save him, overboard
Into the tumbling billows of the main."

Shakespeare.

"Near yonder copse, where once the garden smiled,
And still where many a garden flower grows wild ;
There, where a few torn shrubs the place disclose,
The village PREACHER'S modest mansion rose."

"Beside the bed, where parting life was laid,
And sorrow, guilt, and pain by turns dismayed,
The reverend champion stood."

"At church, with meek and unaffected grace,
His looks adorned the venerable place."

201. This last example shows that in the simple sentence the leading members take a higher pitch.

"Truth from his lips prevailed with double sway,
And fools, who came to scoff, remained to pray."

202. It is agreeable with the rule that all parenthetical clauses and all similes are delivered in a lower pitch. If the parenthetical clause, however, be very important it should be read slower.

203. Parenthetic Clause.

M. P., Middle Pitch; H. P., Higher Pitch; L. P., Lower Pitch.

M. P. "If there's a Power above us—
 L. P. And that there is all nature cries aloud
 Through all her works—
 H. P. He must delight in virtue,
And that
 M. P. —which He delights in must be happy."

204.

EXCEPTIONAL RULE.

Noun sentences present an exception to the general rule. The reason for this is that noun sentences take the place of the subject or object of another predicate, and, agreeably with the rule (par. 191), they demand the same prominence (pitch) as the noun itself in such cases.

P. S. "We thought (adv. s) as we hollowed his narrow bed,
 And smoothed down his lonely pillow,
 N. S. That the foe and the stranger would tread o'er his head,
And we far away on the billow."
 P. S. It is enacted in the laws of Venice,
 Adv. S. If it be proved against an alien
 N. S. That by direct or indirect attempts
He seek the life of any citizen,

The party

Adj. S. —'gainst the which he doth contrive
Shall seize one-half his goods.—Merchant of Venice.

Adv. S. If e'er, when Faith had fallen asleep,
 I heard a voice, "BELIEVE NO MORE!" N. S.
 And heard an ever-breathing shore
 That tumbled in the godless deep,

Prin. S. A warmth within the breast would melt
 The freezing reason's colder part,

Prin. S. And like a man in wrath, the heart
 Stood up and answered,

N. S. I HAVE FELT.

Tennyson.

205. The application of analysis to the variations of Pitch is mechanical in character and only useful in determining the comparative value of sentences. Expressive delivery, however, in its highest aspect, must be founded upon the nature of the emotion and thought; and the following general principles will assist the judgment of the advanced student:

I. The Middle Pitch is the most proper for argument, for philosophical composition, and for what is regarded as thoughtful as distinguished from emotional passages.

II. The High Pitch is the most proper for gay and joyous emotions, for passages of triumph and exultation, or for the extremes of pain, grief, and alarm.

III. Low Pitch is the most proper for the most solemn, sublime and grand passages.

The following exercises will illustrate these three principles

Middle Pitch.

I cannot think it extravagant to imagine that mankind are no less in proportion accountable for the ill use of their dominion over creatures of the lower rank of beings than for the exercise of tyranny over these, their own species. The more entirely the inferior creation is submitted to our power, the more answerable we should seem for our mismanagement of it, and the rather, as the very condition of nature renders these creatures incapable of receiving any recompense for their ill treatment in this.

Pope (Spectator).

207.

High Pitch.

Where rests the sword? where sleeps the brave?

Awake! Cecropia's ally save

From the fury of the blast;

Burst the storm on Phocis' walls;

Rise! or Greece for ever falls—

Up! or Freedom breathes her last.

The jarring States obsequious now,

View the Patriot's hand on high;

Thunder gathering on his brow,

Lightning flashing from his eye.

Borne by the tide of words along,

One voice, one mind, inspire the throng,

(Very high.) "To arms, to arms, to arms," they cry;

"Grasp the shield and draw the sword,

Lead us to Philippi's lord;

Let us conquer him—or die!"

Note.—In reading the preceding and following passages, emphasis is given to italicized and heavy-faced type, the emphasis being stronger on the latter.

FIRE BELLS.

Hear the loud alarum bells, brazen bells!

What a tale of terror now their turbulency tells!

In the startled ear of night, how they scream out their affright!

Too much terrified to speak, they can only ^(very high) shriek, shriek, out of tune.

In the clamorous appealing to the mercy of the fire,
Leaping higher, higher, higher, with a desperate desire
And a resolute endeavour now, now to sit or never
By the side of the pale-faced moon.

Oh, the bells, bells, bells, what a tale their terror tells | of despair,

How they clang | and clash | and roar,|| what a horror
they outpour

On the bosom of the palpitating air.—Poe.

Lo! the mighty sun looks forth!—

Arm! thou leader of the North!

Lo! the mists of twilight fly—

We must vanish, thou must die!

By the sword, and by the spear,

By the hand that knows not fear,

Sea-king—nobly shalt thou fall;

There is joy in Odin's hall!

208.

Low Pitch.

" 'Tis now the very witching time of night,
 When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out
Contágion to the world ; now could I drink hot blood
 And do such bitter business, as the day
 Would quake to look on. Soft ! now to my mòther.
 Oh ! heart, lose not thy nátüre : let not ever
 The soul of Néro | enter this firm bosom.
 Let me be crùel, not unnatùral.
 I will speàk dàggers to her, but úse nòne."—Hamlet.

KING JOHN AND HUBERT.

In this selection, the King, who is throwing out dark suggestions to murder young Arthur, speaks in a deep orotund voice :

KING JOHN.—I had a thing to sáy,—but let it gò :
 The sun is in the heàven, and the proud dáy
 Is all too wànton, and too full of gàvds
 To give me audience. (very deep.) If the midnight bell||
 Did with his iron tongue and brazen mouth
 Sound on|| into the drowsy race of nìght ;
 If this same|| were a church-yard, where we stánd,
 And thou possessed | with a thousand wròngs ;
 Or|| if that surly spirit|| mèlancholy
 Had báked thy bloòd, and made it heàvy, thìck,
 Which else runs tíckling|| up and down the vèins,
 Making that idiot|| láughter|| keep men's eyes,
 And strain their cheeks|| to idle mèiriment ;
 A passion hàtefùl|| to my púrposés ;
 Or, if that thou couldst sée me|| without èyes,

} Lower.

Heár me|| without thine èars, and make reply||
 Without a tòngue, using conceit àlòne,
 Without eyes, ears, and harmful sounds of wòrds,
 Then, in despite of brooded|| watchful dáy,
 I would into thy bosom|| pour my thoughts ;
 But ah, I will nót :—yet I love thee wèll ;
 And by my troth I think|| thou lov'st mè wèll.

HUBERT (louder).—So well that what you bid me undertake,

Though that my dèath were adjunct to my act,
By heaven, I would do it.

KING JOHN (deeper).—Do I not know thou wouldst ?
 (deeper still and deeper as he advances.)

Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eyes
 (very slow) On yon young bòy :|| I tell thee what, my friend,

He is|| a very serpent in my way ;
 And wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread
He|| lies|| before me :|| Dost thou understánd me ?
 (very deep and slow.) Thou art his keeper.

HUBERT.—And I'll keep him só, that he shall not offend your Majesty.

KING JOHN (whisper).—DEATH.

HUBERT.—My lord ? (starting.)

KING JOHN (whisper).—A grave.

HUBERT (very low).—He shall not live.

Shakespeare.

Rate or Movement.

209. The term movement has the same meaning and application in speech as in music—it means the rate at which we speak. We speak slowly, moderately slow, moderately quick, and very quick, according to the state of feeling and the nature of the emotion. The movement in reading must be on the same principle as that which guides and expresses natural emotion. In the expression of joy or humour, or under the influence of great passion, words are uttered with rapidity, and the voice is thrown out with the radical stress (par. 144.) When the sentiments are those of sorrow, or solemnity, or sublimity, or reverence, they are naturally delivered with a slow and dignified movement, as when we sing the Old Hundredth psalm, and with the median stress (par. 147.) Moderately slow movement marks the reading of narratives, essays, newspaper articles and paragraphs.

210. When we wish to read in the slowest movement, the time is prolonged not only by longer pauses between words, but by prolonging the tone of all vowels with long quantities, and of all consonants (sub-tonics) which allow of prolongation. This especially marks the utterance of the liquids l, m, n, ng, and r.

211. The faults of movement must be avoided.

The three principal faults are :—

1. Uniform slowness or drawling.
2. Uniform rapidity.
3. Uniform moderate movement.

In other words, all sameness is monotonous and inexpressive ; while too great rapidity is not only opposed to all dignified and impressive expression, but often passes into indistinctness.

212. Dr. Rush recommends the practice occasionally of extreme rapidity of speech for acquiring command over the voice. "The difficulty of making transitions from one position of the organs of articulation to another, requires an exertion which tends to increase their strength and activity, and thus enables them to execute the usual time of speech without hesitation." The best method of practice is for the pupil to commit a passage to memory, and recite at a considerable distance from the teacher with the utmost rapidity, but with such complete utterance that not a word, syllable, or letter, and especially the last letter, shall pass unheard.

213. It is also good practice for the entire class to read at different rates of movement obedient to the word of command given by the teacher; as "slow," "very slow," "moderately fast," "very fast." Any extracts will serve for this purpose.

CHAPTER V

Emphasis.

214. The expression of emphasis is something besides mere stress of voice. It combines several of the principles of good delivery already explained, and demands great care and judgment to execute it with truthful expression.

Emphasis is of two forms :—

1. THE EMPHASIS OF SENSE.

2. THE EMPHASIS OF FEELING, OR ARBITRARY EMPHASIS.

215. THE EMPHASIS OF SENSE means that greater force which we are incessantly giving to certain classes of words as we read or speak. These words viewed grammatically are nouns, verbs and adjectives; and articles, pronouns, conjunctions, prepositions and auxiliary verbs are simply pronounced free from any distinctive force. In this sense emphasis is to words what accent is to syllables. When reading is marked by equal accent or emphasis on every word, there is in fact no emphasis, but wearisome monotony.

216. Emphasis of Sense on Italicized Words.

Within the navel of this hideous wood,
Immersed in cypress shades|| a sorcerer dwells,
 Of Bacchus and of Circé born, great Còmus,
Deep skilled in all his mother's witcheries;
 And hére, to every thirsty wánderer
 By sly enchántment gives his baneful cup,
 With many murmurs mixed, whose pleasing póison
 The visage quite transforms of him that drinks,
 And the inglorious likeness of a bèast
Fixes instead, unmoulding reason's míntage
Charactered in the face.

Milton.

The wicked flée, when no man pursueth; but the righteous are bold as a lion.

Evil mén understand not júdgment; but they that seek the Lórd understand àll things.

When the RIGHTEOUS are in authority, the people rejðice; but when the WICKED beareth rule, the people mourn.

The emphasis of sense is in demand where comparison and antithesis are expressed.

“The high and the low, the rich and the póor, approach, in point of enjóyment, much nearer to each other than is commonly imagined. Providence never intended that any state here should be completely happy or entirely miserable. If the feelings of pléasure are more numerous and more lively in the higher departments of life, so also are those of pàin. If greatness flatters our vánty, it múltiplies our dàngers. If òpu-lence increases our gratificátions, it increases in the same proportion our désires and dèmands. If the poor are confined to a more narrow circle, yet within that circle lie most of those natural satisfactions which, after all the refinements of art, are found to be the most genuine and trùe."

HOMER AND VIRGIL.

In Hòmer we discern all Greek vivácity; in Virgil, all the Roman státeliness. Hòmer's imagination is by much the most rich and copious; Virgil's, the most cháste and còrrect. The strength of the fòrmer lies in his power of warming the fáncy; that of the látter in his power of touching the hèart. Hòmer's style is more simple and animated; Virgil's more elegant and unifòrm. The first has on many occasions a sublimity to which the látter never attáins; but the látter, in return, never sinks below a certain degree of epic dignity, which cannot so clearly be pronounced of the former.—Blair.

EMPHASIS OF FEELING.

217. Emphasis of Feeling is oftèn called Arbitrary Emphasis, because it does not explain the sense of a passage, but gives expression to some strong feeling that for the moment governs the speaker. Thus, if I ask when am I to go on some important duty, the answer of feeling would be "Go now." Here "now" is uttered with more than usual force if instantaneous action be meant. "And Nathan said unto David, Thou art the man."

Here, as the prophet has prepared the King for the rebuke, he completes the parable and explains it by uttering Thou with extraordinary force. Several qualities of voice are necessary to a complete expression of the Emphasis of Feeling.

1. We must pause before uttering the word.
2. We must utter it in a higher pitch than the preceding words.
3. We must dwell longer upon the word.
4. We must use the falling inflection.
5. The word must be given with genuine passion and truthfulness.

218. The following selections present examples of both forms of emphasis. The teacher will find it profitable to question the class, both as to the reason for giving the emphasis to the proper word and the manner of executing it. Thus in Nathan's parable, if we ask why "Thou" is to be emphasized, we answer, because David has expressed his anger against guilt, unconscious that he was the guilty person, because he had supposed some other one was the criminal. Then Nathan gives tenfold effect to his reproof when he adds force to "Thou."

219. Again, the method of expressing the emphasis may be analyzed thus:—

1. Read—"And Nathan said to David, Thou art the man." Here pause before "Thou."
2. Read as before, pause, and raise the voice on "Thou."
3. Read again, pause, raise the pitch, and prolong "Thou."
4. Read with all the above methods, and giving a falling inflection.

The italics show the emphasis of sense; the heavy letters the emphasis of feeling.

PORTIA.—Then must the Jew be merciful.

SHYLOCK.—On what compulsion|| must I?—tell me that.

PORTIA.—The quality of mercy is not strained ;
It droppeth|| as the gentle rain from Heaven
Upon the place beneath ; it is twice bless'd ;
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest. It becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown ;
His scéptre|| shows the force of tèmporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dréad and fèar of kìngs.
But mercy|| is|| abòve this sceptred sway ;
It is enthroned in|| the hèarts of kìngs,
It is an attribute of Gód|| himself ;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
When mércy séasons Justice.

Shakespeare.

THE EMPHATIC TIE.

220. The Emphatic Tie is the application of the emphasis of sense to groups of words grammatically and logically allied. In the structure of the sentence the leading members are often separated by intervening qualifying or modifying phrases, and even sentences. It is always important to distinguish by a similar modulation these leading members. When the interrupting phrases are mingled with the leading members, the voice varies its pitch for their utterance ; but it should return to the pitch and expression of the first leading member the moment it takes up the interrupted parts. This is called the Emphatic Tie.

221. In the following passage the heavy letters indicate the leading members :—

When Cheerfulness, a nymph of healthiest hue,
 Her bow across her shoulder flung,
 Her buskins gemmed with morning dew,
Blew an inspiring air that dale and thicket rung
 The hunter's call, to Fawn and Dryad known.

222. The word “cheerfulness” is the leading word, and is read loudest and highest ; the remainder of the line and the succeeding two lines are read lower. The predicate of “cheerfulness” is in the fourth line ; but if the reader reads the participle “flung” in the same pitch as “cheerfulness” it becomes the predicate by the mere action of the voice. After uttering “inspiring air” in the same pitch as “cheerfulness,” the voice again descends to utter the remaining clause of the same line ; but when reading the “hunter’s call” it must rise to the same pitch as “inspiring air,” as “hunter’s call” is in apposition with “inspiring air.” If, however, the reader deliver “that dale and thicket rung” as high as “hunter’s call,” and make no pause after “rung,” the intransitive verb rung is made transitive and “hunter’s call” its object, and the grammar and sense are both violated.

223. The following are additional examples, the small capitals indicating the leading members and the parentheses separating them :—

Thus while he spake|| EACH PASSION (dimmed his face, Thrice changed with pale), IRE, ENVY and DESPAIR.

Here, as “ire, envy and despair” are appositives to passion, the relation must be shown by the emphatic tie.

CHAPTER VI.

Transition.

224. By Transition is meant the power of giving proper variety to reading.

225. Reading without transition is monotony.

226. To give the proper variety to all we read aloud, demands great judgment and a correct conception of the subject. But the best educated people, who may understand perfectly what they read, fail in the vocal power to give this proper variety.

227. As correct and agreeable transition can only be accomplished after studying and mastering all the previous subjects of study, its proper place is the end of these studies.

228. GENERAL RULE.—There must be harmony between the voice and the sentiment.

Explanation.—If the subject of description or the sentiment be one of calmness and gentleness, the voice must be soft and gentle. If it be stormy or noisy or contentious, as in war or exciting and turbulent debate, it becomes high and powerful.

229. The following exercises should be read according to the suggestions in the margin. The dashes are for pauses; the italics and heavy letters for emphasis, the emphasis being stronger on the latter :—

I.

(SOFT.) Soft | is the strain | when zephyr gently blows,
And the smooth stream | in smoother number flows ;

(LOUDER.) But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,

(SLOW BUT STRONG.) The hoarse, rough verse should like the torrent | roar.

When Ajax strives | some rock's vast weight to throw,

The line too labours, and the words move slow ;
 (QUICK AND LIVELY.) Not so when swift Camilla | scours the plain,
 Flies | o'er the unbending corn | and skims
 along the main.

Pope.

II.

(LOW OROTUND.) Yet half I hear the parting spirit's sigh,
 "It is a dread and awful thing to die!"

(SOLEMN.) Mysterious worlds | untravelled by the sun,
 Where Time's far wandering tide has never run,

From your unfathom'd shades and viewless spheres

A warning comes | unheard by other ears.

(LOUD OROTUND.) 'Tis Heaven's commanding trumpet, long and loud,

Like Sinai's thunder | peàling from the cloud !
 While nature hears with terror-mingled trust,
 The shock | that hurls her fabric to the dùst ;

(TREMOR.) And, like the trembling Hebrew, when he trod
 The roaring waves, and called upon his Gód,
 With mortal terrors | clouds immortal bliss,
 And shrièks, and hóvers | o'er the dark abyss!

Campbell.

III.

(Orotund throughout.)

(LOW AND SOFT.) These, as they change, Almighty Father, these Are but the varied Gód. The rolling yéar
Is full of Thèe.

And oft thy voice | in dreadful thùnder speaks;
And oft at dawn, deep noon, or falling éve,
By brooks and groves | in hollow whispering
gàles.

(STRONG & LOUDER.) In wínter | awful Thòu! (Louder) with clouds and storms

Around Thee thrówn, tempest o'er tempest rólled.
Majestic darkness! On the whirlwind's wing,
Riding sublime, Thou bidd'st the world adòre,
And hùmblest nature with thy northern blàst."

Thomson.

IV.

(From Richelieu.)

RICHELIEU.—

(STERNLY CALM.) Adrian de Máuprat, men have called me crùel;

(LOUDER.) I am nòt; I am just.—I found France | rent .
asunder—

The rich men | déspots, and the poor | banditti;
Slòth | in the márt, and schísm within the tèmples;

Bráwls | festering to rebèllion; and weak láws
Rotting away with rúst | in antique shèaths,

(HIGH AND SWELLING.) I have recreated France ; and from the ashes

Of the old feudal and decrepid cárcáse,

Civilizátion | on her luminous wings,

Soàrs,—phoenix|| like, to Jove. What was my art ?

(MOCKERY.) Geníus | some sày,—some fòrtune,—

(Sneer) witchcraft sóme.

(HIGH AND PURE TONE.) Not so ; my art was|| Justice. Fòrce and Fráud,

Misname it crùelty. Yóu shaH confute them !

My champion, yòu." Bulwer.

V.

HOHENLINDEN.

(LOW.) On Linden, when the sun was lów,
All bloodless, lay the untrodden snow,
And dark as winter was the flów
Of Iser | rolling rapidly.

(LOUDER.) But Linden saw another sight,

(MONOTONE.) When the drum beat at dead of níght,

(BOLDER.) Commanding fires of death to light
The darkness of her scenery.

By torch and trumpet fast arráyed,

(VERY BOLD.) Each warrior drew his battle bláde,
And furious every charger neighed,
To join the dreadful rêvelry.

(HIGH AND LOUD.) Then shook the hills | with thunder riven,

Then rushed the steed to battle driven,

And louder | than the bolts of Heaven,

Far flashed | the red artillery.

(DEEPER And redder yet | those fires shall glòw,
BUT STRONG.) On Linden's hills of blood-stained snów ;
And darker yet shall be the flów
Of Iser | rolling ràpidly.

(HIGHER.) 'Tis morn, but scarce yon lurid sún
(MONOTONE.) Can pierce the war clouds rolling dun,
While furious Frank and fiery Hun

(LOUD.) Shòut | in their sulphurous canòpy.
The combat deèpens !—(High and powerful.)
On, ye brave,
Who rush to glóry, or the gràve !

(VERY HIGH.) Wàve | Múnich, all thy banners wàve,
And | charge | with all thy chivalry.

(PLAINTIVE Ah ! few shall part where many méet !
AND LOW, WITH The snów | shall be their winding shèt,
TREMOR. And every turf | beneath their féet
Shall be a soldier's sepùlchre.

Campbell.

VI.

THE DEATH OF MARMION.

(LOW AND MOURNFUL.) With fruitless labour | Clara bóund
And strove to stanch the gushing wòund ;
The Mónk | with unavailing cáres,
Exhausted all the Church's práyers ;
(VERY DEEP.) Ever| he said,| that close and néar,
A lãdy's voice| was in his èar,
And that the priést| he could not hèar,
For, that she ever sùng :

(VERY HIGH PITCH, BUT SOFT NOT LOUD, AND MONOTONE LIKE A CHANT.) "In the lost battle| borne down by the flying,
Where mingles war's rattle| with groans of the dying!"

(MIDDLE PITCH.) So the notes rung.

(DEEP OROTUND.) "Avòid thee, fiend! with cruel hánd
Shake not| the dying sinner's sànd ;

(HIGHER.) O look, my son, upon yon sígn
Of the Redeemer's grace| divine ;
O think| on faith and bliss !

(LOWER.) By many a death-bed have I béen,
(WITH TREMOR.) And many a sinner's parting sèen,
But never| aught like this."

(LOUDER AND HIGHER.) The wár| that for a space did fail,
Now trebly thundering|| swelled the gal,
And| Stanley! was the cry,

(QUICKER.) A light| on Marmion's visage spread
And fired| his glazing eye ;
With dying hand| above his héad|

(HIGH.) He shook the fragments of his bláde, (THOROUGH STRESS) And shouted—Victory !

ON "VICTORY," Charge| Chester| CHARGE ; On—
WITH GREAT Stanley—On !"
POWER TO

"CHARGE.") Were the last words of Màrmion."

As he utters "Stanley" the voice grows fainter, gasping at the last "On."

The last line is given calmly, but mournfully,

VII.

CLARENCE'S DREAM.

- CLARENCE.—My dream was lengthen'd| àfter life ;
- (HIGH.) Oh, then began the tempest to my soul !
- (LOWER.) I passed, methought, the melancholy flood
- (OROTUND.) With that grim ferryman, which poets write of,
- (MONO- Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.
- TONE.) The first| that there did greet my stranger soul
- Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick,
- (HIGH Who cried,—“ What scourge for pèrjury
- OROTUND. Can this dark monarchy|| afford false
- Clarence?”
- (LOWER.) And so he vanished ; then came wandering by
- (HIGHER, A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
- WITH TERROR.) Dabbled in blood ; and he shriek'd out aloud,
- (HIGH, “ Clarence|| is come — false, fleeting,
- ALMOST FALSETTO perjured Clarence,
- NOT LOUD.) That stabb'd me, in the field by Tewkesbury.
- (HIGH AND Seize on him, Furies ; take him into tòrments !”
- LOUD.)
- (LOWER With that, methought a legion of foul fiends
- BUT MARK'D Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears
- BY HORROR.) Such hideous cries, that with the very noise
- (TREMOR, I trembling wàk'd|| and for a season áfter
- WITH TERROR.) Could not believe but that I was in hèll !
- Such terrible impression| made my dream.
- (LOW AND Oh, Brackenbúry, I have done those things
- SOFT.) That now give evidence | against the soul,
- For Edwàrd's sake; and sèe |how he requites me!

(VERY LOW.) Oh, Gód | if my deep prayers cannot appédse

(OROTUND Thée,

MINGLED WITH But Thou wilt be avenged | on my misdeeds,

TREMOR.) Yet | execute Thy wrath | on mè | aldne ;

(HIGHER, Oh, spare my guiltless wife and my poor

PLAINTIVE.) children !

(CALM BUT I pray thee, gentle keeper | stay by me ;

MOURNFUL.) My soul is heavy, and I fain would slèep.

Shakespeare.

CHAPTER VII.

Imitative Modulation.

230. In the compositions of the great imaginative authors, poets and fictionists, words are often the echo of natural sounds, and have been selected for their appropriateness. "A certain bird is called the cuckoo, from the sound which it emits. When one sort of wind is said to whistle and another to roar—when a serpent is said to hiss, a fly to buzz, and falling timber to crash—when a stream is said to flow, and hail to rattle, the analogy between the word and the thing is plainly discernible." Poetry and fiction abound in examples of this kind ; and the reader who would realize the picture embodied in words which are the echo of the sound must utter those words as nearly like the natural sound as possible.

HARSH SOUND OF HEAVY GATES.

On a sudden open fly

The infernal gates, and on their hinges grate

Harsh thunder.

231. Satan having related with exultation his success against man, instead of applause is entertained with a general hiss by his infernal audience, who are with himself transformed into serpents. The reader will see how appropriate words have been selected by the great poet for the purpose :—

So having said, awhile he stood expecting
 Their universal shout and high applause
 To fill his ear, when, contrary, he hears
 On all sides, from innumerable tongues,
 A dismal, universal hiss, the sound
 Of public scorn.

He would have spoke,
 But hiss for hiss returned with forked tongue
 To forked tongue, for now were all transformed
 Alike, to serpents all, as accessories
 To his bold riot; dreadful was the din
 Of hissing through the hall, thick swarming now
 With complicated monsters, head and tail,
Scorpion and asp, and amphisbæna dire,
Cerastes horned, hydrus and elops drear,
 And dipsas (not so thick swarmed once the soil
 Bedropt with blood of Gorgon, or the isle
 Ophiusa); but still great, he, the midst,
 Now dragon grown, larger than whom the sun
 Engendered in the Pythian vale or slime,
 Huge Python, and his power no less he seemed Above the rest, still to retain.

Milton.

SOUND OF A BOW STRING.

The string let fly,
Twang'd short and sharp, like the shrill swallow's cry.

Pope.

SLOWNESS OF MOTION.

First march the heavy mules securely slow,
 O'er hills, o'er dales, o'er crags, o'er rocks they go.

Pope.

The Bells.

I.

SLEIGH BELLS.

Begin High Pitch, about C natural, and very soft but pure tones. Dwell on the italics like chanting, but imitative of the kind of bells named in the verse.

Hear the sledges with their bells,

Silver bells! ¹

What a world of merriment | their melody foretells!

How they tinkle, tinkle, tinkle, ²

In the icy air of night,

While the stars | that oversprinkle,

All the heavens | seem to twinkle

With a crystalline delight;

Keeping time, time, time, ³

In a sort of Runic rhyme,

To the tintinnabulation | that so musically wells

From the bells, bells, bells,

Bells, Bells, Bells. ⁴

From the jingling and the tinkling of the bells.

1. Dwell on the "lls."

2. Imitate,

3. Chant "time," dwelling on the "m,"

4. Imitate sleigh bells,

II.

WEDDING BELLS.

This stanza must be louder than the last. The movement is lively and quick; the radical stress (par. 144) prevails, and "bells" should be chimed. Pitch from A to C natural, chant the italics; chime the heavy type:—

Hear the wedding bells—

Golden bells! ⁵

What a world of happiness | their harmony foretells!

Through the balmy air of night

How they ring out their delight!

From the molten golden notes,

And all in tune.

What a liquid ditty floats, ⁶

To the turtle dove | that listens, when she gloats

On the móon! ⁷

Oh, from out the sounding cells ⁸

What a gush of euphony voluminously wells! ⁹

How it swells!

How it dwells—

On the future! How it tells

Of the rapture that impels

To the swinging and the ringing

Of the bells, bells, bells, ¹⁰

Of the bells, bells, bells, bells, ¹¹

Bells, bells, bells!

To the rhyming and the chiming of the bells. ¹²

5. Chant.

6. Very soft.

7. All soft, and high, and musical.

8. Chant.

H

9. Chant italics.

10. Chant.

11. Chime merrily.

12. Chant, dwell on "bells."

III.

FIRE BELLS.

Bold and loud, but not too high pitch, from F to A. Median and thorough stress (par. 147). No chimes, and the movement sometimes fast and sometimes slow, with an expression of alarm.

Hear the loud alarum bells—

Brazen bells, ¹³

What a tale of terror now their turbulency tells ! ¹⁴

In the startled ear of night,

How they scream out their affright !

Too much horrified to speak,

They can only shriek, SHRIEK ¹⁵

Out of tune,

In a clamorous appealing | to the mercy of the FIRE ! ¹⁶

In a mad expostulation|| with the deaf and frantic fire,

Leaping higher, higher, higher ¹⁷

With a desperate desire ;

And a resolute endeavour,

Now, now to sit or never

By the side|| of the pale-faced moon !

Oh, the bells, bells, bells, ¹⁸

What a tale | their terror tells

Of despair ! ¹⁹

How they CLANG|| and CLASH|| and ROAR, ²⁰

What a horror they outpour

13. Toll like fire bell.

14. Half chant.

15. Loud.

16. Prolong "fire."

17. Rise a note on each "higher," and sound like a bell.

18. Quick and loud.

19. Low pitch and slow.

20. In a harsh, loud tone, like a loud bell.

On the bosom of the palpitating air !
 Yet the ear it fully knows
 By the twanging
 And the clanging,
 How the danger sinks (1) and swells, (2) ²¹
 By the sinking or the swelling or the anger of the bells;
 Of the bells—
 Of the bells, bells, bells, bells, ²²
 BELLS, BELLS, BELLS, ²³
 In the clamor and the clangor of the BELLS !

IV.

FUNERAL BELLS.

The tone should be deep but not loud in this stanza. The funeral bells suggest tolling, and the swelling tones or median stress.

Hear the TOLLING of the BELLS, ²⁴

Iron bells.

What a world of solemn thought their monody compels !

In the silence of the night ;

How we shiver ²⁵ with affright,

At the melancholy menace of their tone !

For every sound that floats

From the rust within their throats

Is a groan. ²⁶

And the péople—ah, the péople—

They that dwell up in the steeple,

21. (1) soft, (2) loud.

22. Slow and deep.

23. Quick and loud.

24. Deep and prolonged monotone, especially on "tolling."

25. Tremulous.

26. Tolling like a bell.

All alone !

And who tolling, tolling, tolling ²⁷

In that muffled monotone,

Feel a glory in so rolling ²⁸

On the human heart | a stone.

They are neither man nor woman—

They are neither brute nor human—

They are ghouls.

And their king it is who tolls, ²⁹

And he rolls, rolls, rolls, rolls, ³⁰

A pæan from the bells !

And his merry bosom swells

With the pæan of the bells !

And he dances and he yells ; ³¹

Keeping time, time, time, ³²

In a sort of Runic rhyme,

To the pæan of the bells—

Of the bells ;

Keeping time, time, time,

In a sort of Runic rhyme,

To the throbbing of the bells, ³³

Of the bells, bells, bells.

To the sobbing of the bells, ³⁴

Keeping time, time, time,

As he knells, knells, knells, ³⁵

In a happy Runic rhyme,

27. Imitate funeral bell.

28. Higher Pitch.

29. Loud.

30. Imitate strong tolling bell.

31. Very loud.

32. Deeper and more solemn.

33. Deep toll and slow.

34. Give tremor here.

35. Very deep tolling.

To the rolling of the bells—
 Of the bells, bells, bells—³⁶
 To the tolling of the bells,
 Of the bells, bells, bells, bells ³⁷ —
Bells, bells, bells,
 To the moaning and the groaning of the bells. ³⁸

Edgar A. Poe.

THE ECHOES.

In reading the following passages, dwell on the italic words, imitative of the sounds, and read the echo word fainter and fainter until almost inaudible, but pure toned to the last. Median stress throughout.

 The splendour falls|| on castle walls
 And snowy summits|| old in story ;
 The long light shakes|| across the lakes ;
 And the wild cataract|| leaps in glory.
 < > < > < >
Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying ;
 < > < > < > < >
Blow, bugle,|| answer echoes,|| DYING, dying, dying.
 Oh hark ! Oh hear ! how thin and clear, ³⁹
 And thinner, clearer, further going ;
 Oh ! sweet and far from cliff and scar
 The horns of elf-land faintly blowing.

36. Higher.

37. Continue solemn tolling.

38. Very deep, slow and solemn.

39. This stanza is to be read high, but faint and soft.

Blow, let us hear the purple glens replying;

Blow, bugle, answer echoes, || DYING, dying, dying.

Our echoes roll from soul to soul, (deeper)

And grow for ever and for ever.

Blow bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying ;

And answer, echoes, answer—DYING, dying, dying.Tennyson.

SECTION V.

Accent, Rhythm and Metre.

232. "Rhythm is a principle of proportion introduced into language."—Abbott's English Lessons.

233. All words of more than one syllable have an accented syllable—that is, one syllable is sounded heavier than the other, as eagle, father, Joseph. When there are more than two syllables there will be a lighter and a heavier syllable. In such cases the heavier is called the primary, the lighter the secondary accent, as porcupine, philosophy.

234. In common conversation and writing, the accented syllables do not succeed each other in very regular order.

235. But when a speaker or a writer appeals to the passions, or composes under the influence of the imagination, not only is the voice modulated, but the words, even if not spoken but only written, acquire regularity in the succession of accented and unaccented syllables.

236. When this regularity is not uniform, as in poetry, it is called rhythm.

237. When the accented and unaccented syllables follow in regular order, as in poetry, it is called metre.

Note.—The tendency of children learning to read is to accent every syllable. As they advance in reading they still continue to accent every word, and unless this habit is checked at an early age it will mark and deform the delivery of adult age.

If every word be accented, not only would the reading be inconveniently and painfully slow, but all the lights and shades of expression would be destroyed.

238. Rules for Reading Rhythmically.

In order to give the music of expression to all rhythmical compositions, the reader must—

- I. Pause frequently and at regular intervals.
- II. Divide the words into sections, similar to bars in music.
- III. Let each section begin with an accented word or syllable.
- IV. When monosyllables destitute of expression, as articles, conjunctions, or prepositions, occur, they must each either be combined, as an unaccented syllable, with leading words, or if they stand alone there must be a brief silence before them, as a substitute for an accented word or syllable.

239. It will be seen from these rules that groups of words in speech and reading may be, as notes in music, divided into regular portions, governed by the accented syllables, and, as in music, forming bars, each bar commencing with an accented syllable or a pause of equal length to the omitted accented syllable.

240. In the following sentence each bar marked by the upright dash commences with an accented syllable.

1. The accented syllable is in italics.
2. When there is no accent a cypher (0) precedes the words.
3. When a leading word of one syllable occurs, and its quantity or vowel sound is short, a cypher follows such a word.

4. When a cypher follows such word, the reader either pauses and fills up the time of a bar with silence, or he prolongs the word.

5. In all cases each bar, as in music, occupies the same time in delivery.

0 ¹In the | ²sec—ond | ³cen—tury | 0 ⁴of the | ⁵Christ—ian |

¹²fair—est | ¹³part of the | ¹⁴earth 0 | 0 ¹⁵and the | ¹⁶most 0 | ¹⁷civ—
¹⁸ilized | ¹⁹portion | 0 ²⁰of man | ²⁰kind.

241. Explanation.—In reading the above passage each bar occupies the same length of time. Thus the word “earth” in the fourteenth bar takes as long time for utterance as “civilized” in the seventeenth or “empire of” in the eighth bar.

The seventh bar is occupied by the word “the” alone ; but the cypher before “the” means that there must be a silent pause where it stands. The ninth and twentieth are occupied by words with long vowels, o and i, and two liquids, m and n, all of which can be prolonged in utterance. Hence each of those bars occupies the same time as any one of the others.

242. If we count common time to each bar, the sections would be uttered according to regular beat, 1, 2, 3, 4.

Si, stands for silence.

243. The following passage is arranged in this rhythmical order.

A dash precedes the accented syllable, and a cypher indicates the absence of an accented syllable:—

It re|mains with | you then | 0 to decide | whether that |

HOW TO READ POETRY.

244. All poetry is metrical. It is written with accented and unaccented syllables, occurring at regular intervals.

“As the voice rises from (a) conversational non-modulation to (b) rhetorical modulation, and from modulation to (c) singing, so the arrangement of words rises from (A) conversational non-arrangement to (B) rhetorical rhythm, and from rhythm to (C) metre.”—Abbott's English Lessons.

245. When reading poetry we must sustain the music of the metre, but avoid the defect of sing-song.

246. The following rules will assist the reader to preserve the metre and avoid the sing-song:—

I. Regard the accented syllables, but do not give too much weight to the voice in pronouncing such syllables.

II. Do not alter the pitch for the accented syllable or word. In sing-song the voice rises on the accented and falls on the unaccented syllable : e. g. :—

Oh, keep me in Thy heavenly way,
 And bid the tempter flee ;
 And let me never, never stray
 From happiness and Thee.

If we raise the voice slightly on each italic syllable and drop it on the unaccented, giving it also more force of voice, it is sure to be sing-song. If we read it all on a level, only varying the pitch where the emphasis demands it, the tendency will be diminished.

III. If the accented word be a monosyllable, pause, if the sense allows it, before such word.

Thus in the following words, if we pause, the sing-song is diminished :—

There | shall I bathe | my weary soul |
 In seas | of heavenly rest.

IV. Vary the length of the pauses between words, and vary the length of syllables and words, especially when the sense allows it. Never dwell long on unimportant words, as prepositions and conjunctions. Thus in reading the following stanza with all the regularity of the metre it unavoidably becomes sing-song :—

And redder yet those fires shall glow,
 On Linden's hills of blood-stained snow ;
 And darker yet shall be the flow
 Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

Now observe the pauses, and lengthen the syllables in italics.

And||redder yet||those fires||shall glow,
 On Linden's hills||of blood-stained snow;
 And darker yet||shall be the flow
 Of Iser||rolling||rapidly.
 But||to the hero, when||his sword
 Has won||the battle||for the free,
 Thy||voice||sounds||like a prophet's word,
 And||in its hollow tones||are heard
 The thanks||of millions||yet to be.

V. In reading four-line stanzas, when we commence the third line we should descend a tone in pitch; and, unless the sense be very complete at the termination of that line, its last word should have a rising inflection. For variety, the last word of the second line should end with a falling inflection, unless that line be dependent on the third line.

VI. Avoid descending step by step on the last words and syllables of the last line. The descent on the final word is not one of pitch, but of inflection. Otherwise the pitch ought to be as loud and as high on that word as on any other.

VII. Avoid the great and common defect of ending the last word with a rising pitch and inflection, giving the voice a kind of leap and twist upwards, instead of a descent.

247. In cases which rarely occur, where the last word is a noun in the possessive case, or an adjective qualifying, or a preposition governing a noun that commences the next line, there should be no pause. The proper inflection also must be observed on the last word of the line.

When to enshrine his reliques| in the sun's
 Bright temple, to Egyptian Thebes| he flies.

Milton.

I know not ; but I'm sure| 'tis safer| to
 Avoid what's grown| than question| how 'tis born.

Shakespeare.

248. Elision.—When the vowels e and o are left out, and supplied by an apostrophe, in poetry, they should always be pronounced in reading :

“ By whisp'ring winds soon lull'd asleep.”

Here “whispering” should be pronounced in full. The objection to this would be that the metre would be violated by adding half a foot or an extra syllable to the line. But the defect is obviated by lengthening the quantity or time of pronouncing the syllable “whis,” and by uttering the remainder of the word “—pering” more rapidly. This is not required in the word “lull'd,” as it is customary to leave out the e before the d of participles. By this rule tim'rous, gen'rous, dang'rous, should always in poetry be pronounced in full without the elision. This rule does not apply to the elision of consonants, as o'er, e'er, &c.

The vowels of the words to and the must always be pronounced in poetry, although the poet may put the apostrophe in their place. Thus :

By prayer | th' offen|ded De|ity| t' appease, must be read with the words the and to fully pronounced. If the words be arranged according to the principle explained in par. 240, in bars with pauses for silence, the metre is preserved.

0 By | prayer| 0 the of|fended | Deity | 0 to ap|pease.

SECTION VI.

SELECTIONS FOR PRACTICE.

249. These selections are prepared for the study of expressive reading, with head and foot notes, with emphatic words in italics and heavy type, and the expressive words with pause and inflection marks. In reading according to these marks and emphasized words the pupils should be frequently questioned as to the reason for any inflection, pause or emphasis, and both the literary structure and the spirit of the passage brought under review and criticism.

250. It will also be of advantage to change the inflections and transfer the pauses and emphases to other words, or dispense with them, that the pupils may see the effect of violating or neglecting elocutionary principles.

251. It is well for the teacher to commence with simultaneous reading ; but this method should not be continued, as it is apt to end in a mechanical and monotonous style.

252. In practising simultaneously the following methods are recommended :—

1. Commence with clauses and phrases, the teacher leading and the pupils following. Let the pauses be longer than usual, and the inflections very marked.

2. Let the teacher read a stanza—not more than four lines of poetry. Then let the pupils read simultaneously. Practise on the same plan with a chapter of the Bible, taking an entire verse for each simultaneous practice.

3. Increase the number of stanzas or verses until the pupils can by themselves, after the teacher has first read the whole passage, read a whole chapter, poem, or other selection.

4. In this practice the utmost regularity and "unison" should be observed. Every word should be heard distinctly, as if uttered only by one voice, just as in singing a hymn. The pauses must be well observed, but perhaps a little longer than in individual reading, the inflections and emphases alike, and the articulation perfect.

Selections for Reading.

FILIAL PIETY.

Filial Piety! It is the primal bond of society—it is that instinctive principle which, panting for its proper good, soothes, unbiddén, each sense and sensibility of màn!—it now *quív*ers | on every líp!—it now béams from every èye!—it is an emanation of that gratitùde which, softening under the sense of recollected good, is eager to own the vast | countless debt | it ne'er, alas! can páy, for so many | long years of unceasing solicítudes, honorable self-deníals, life-preserving càres!—it is that part of our practice, where duty | drops its àwe! | where reverence | refines into lòve! | it asks no aid of memóry!—it needs not the deductions of réason!—pre-existing, paramount over àll, whether law or human rúle, few arguments can in-créase | and none can dèminish it!—it is the sacrament of our nàture!—not only the dúty, but the indùlgence of màn—it is his first great privilége—it is amongst his last most endearing delights!—it causes the bosom to glow with reverberated lòve!—it requites the visitations of nàture, and returns the blessings that have been recèived!—it fires emotion | into vital príncipe—it renders habituated instinct | into a master-pàssion—swáys all the sweetest energies of màn—hangs over each vicissitùde | of all that must pass away—aids the melancholy virtues | in their last sad tasks of life, to cheer the languors of decrepitude and age—explores the thought—elucidates the aching eye—and breathes sweet consolation | even in the awful moments of dis-solution !

WAR WITH NAPOLEON.

(Appeal and Invocation.)

I cannot but imagine the virtuous hèroes, legislàtors, and patriòts, of every age and cóuntry, are bending from their elevated seats | to witness this contést, as if they were incàpable, till it be brought to a favourable issúe, of enjoying their eternal repòse. Enjoy that repòse, illustrious immortàls! Your mantle fèll when you ascended; and thousànds, inflamed with your spirit, and impatient to tread in your steps, are ready “to swear by Him | that sitteth upon the thróne, and liveth for ever and èver,”|| they will protect Frèedom | in her last asylùm, and never desert that cause| which you sustained by your labòurs, and cemented with your blood. And Thóu, sole Rùler among the children of mén, to whom the shields of the earth belong, “gird on Thy sword, thou Most Mighty,” go forth with our hosts in the day of bàttle! Impart, in addition to their hereditary vàlour, that confidence of success| which springs from Thy prèsence! Pour into their hearts | the spirit of departed heroes! Inspire them with Thine òwn: and, while led by Thine hànd, and fighting under Thy bànners, open Thou their eyes | to behold in every vàlley, and in every plàin, what the prophet beheld by the same illumination—chariòts of fíre, and hòrses of fíre! “Then shall the strong man be as tòw, and the maker of it as a spàrk; and they shall both burn together, and none shall quèench them.”

Robert Hall.

DANIEL BEFORE BELSHAZZAR.

The answer of Daniel must be given with great calmness and dignity, and in the best orotund voice :—

BELSHAZZAR.—Art thou that Daniél | of the Hebrew ráce |
 In whom the excellence of wisdom dwells ||
 As in the góds? I have heard thy fàme ;—behold
 Yon mystic lètters | fláming on the wàll,
 That, in the darkness of their fateful impórt,
Baffle the wisest of Chaldea's sàges !
 Rèad | and interprèt, and the satrap robe
 Of scarlet shall invest thy lìmb—the chain
 Of gòld adorn thy néck—and all the world
 Own thee | thírd rùler of Chaldea's reàlm !

DANIEL.—Belsházzar, be thy gifts unto *thysel*f,
 And thy rewards to othèrs. I, the servant
 Of Gód, will read God's writing to the kìng.
 The Lord of hosts | to thy great ancestor,
 To Nabonassár, gave the all-ruling sceptre
 O'er all the nations, kingdoms, languàges ;
 Lord paramount of life and déath, he sléw
 Where'er he willed ; and where he willed, men lived ;
 His word exálted, and his word debàsed ;
 And so his heart swèlled ùp ; and, in its pride,
 Arose to heàven ! But then the lord of earth
 Became an outcàst from the sòns of mèn—
 Companion of the browsing bèasts ! the dews
 Of night | fell cold | upon his crownless brów,
 And the wild asses of the desert | fed
 Round their unenvied pèer ! And so he knèw

That God is sovereign| o'er earth's sceptred lords.
 But thóu, his sòn, unwarned, untaught, untámed,
Belshazzár, hast arisen agàinst the Lord,
 And in the vessels of His hóuse| hast quaffed
 Profane libàtions, 'mid thy slaves and womén,
 To gods of gòld, and stóne, and woòd, and laughed
 The King of kings, the God of góds, to scòrn.
 Now | hear the words, and hear their secret meaning—
 “Numbèred !” twice “Nùmbered ! Weìghed ! Divi- ded !” Kíng,
 Thy reign is nùmbered, and thyself art wèighed,
 And wanting in the balànce, and thy realm
 Sévered, and to conquering Persìan given !
Milman.

IV.

MERCY TO ANIMALS.

- I would not enter on my list of friends|
¹ (Though graced with polish'd manners and fine sènsè, Yet wanting sensibility) the mán
 Who needlèssly sets foot upon a worm.
 An inadvertent step| may crush the snáil
 That crawls at evening in the public pàth ;
 But he that has humánity, forewárn'd,
 Will tread aside, and let the reptile live.
² The creeping vermin, loathsome to the síght,
 And charged, perhaps, with venóm, that intrudes,
 A visitor unwelcóme, into scenes
 Sacred to neatness and repóse, the alcóve,

1. Read the parenthetic clause in lower pitch. Return to the pitch of “friends” on the word “man,” thus connecting by the emphatic tie. (Par. 220.)

2. Connect “creeping vermin” with “may die,” reading both phrases in a louder tone, and the intervening clause in a lower tone.

The chàmbér, or refectóry, may die—
 A necessary act| incurs nó blâme.
 Not so when, held within their proper bôunds,
 And guiltless of offence, they range the air,
 Or take their pastime in the spacious fiêld :
Thère| they are privileged ; and he that hurts
 Or harms them there, is guilty of a wròng,
 Disturbs the economy of nature's reàlm,
 Who, when she fórm'd, design'd them an abóde.
 The sum is this : If man's convènience, hèalth,
 Or sáfety interfére, his ríghts and cláims
 Are pàramount | and must extinguish theirs,
 Else they are àll—the meanest things that àre—
 As free to live, and to enjoy that lífe,
 As God was free | to form them| at the first,
 Who| in His sovereign wisdom| made them all.
 Ye, therefore, who love mércy, teach your sons
 To love it too.

Cowper.

V. CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE.

1.

¹ Half a léague, half a léague,

Half a league onward,

² All in the valley of death

Rode the six hundred.

³ "Forward the Light Brigade!

1. Begin solemnly, pointing forward to the right.
 2. Deeper and more solemn.
 3. Loud and high; fullest orotund voice as in command, uttering "charge" with all the power of the voice, but not quickly.

Charge for the guns," he said.

⁴ Into the valley of death
Rode the six hundred.

⁵ "Forward the Light Brigade!"

⁶ Was there a man dismay'd?
Not though the soldier knew
Some one had blunder'd:
Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs but to dó | and díe.

⁷ Into the valley of death
Rode the six hundred.

3.

⁸ *Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon in front of them,
⁹ Volley'd and thùnder'd;
Storm'd at with shot and shéll,
Boldly they rode and wèll,
Into the jaws of death,
¹⁰ Into the mouth of hèll
Rode the six hundred.*

4. Return to solemn delivery as No. 2.

5. Similar to No. 3.

6. With energy and boldness.

7. Same as No. 2.

8. Loud and imitative.

9. Dwell on "volley'd and thundered."

10. Utter "hell" with great power, but not too high nor too quick.

4.

- ¹¹ Flash'd | all their sabres báre,
Flash'd | as they turn'd in àir,
Sabring the gunners thére,
Charging an àrmy, while
All the world wònder'd :
Plunged in the battery-smóke,
Right through the line | they bròke ;
Cossack and Russián
- ¹² Rèl'd | from the sabre-stroke
Shatter'd and sùnder'd,
- ¹³ Then they rode bàck, but not—
Not | the six hundred.

5.

- ¹⁴ Cannon to right of thém,
Cannon to left of thém,
Cannon behind thém
Volley'd and thunder'd ;
Storm'd at with shot and shell,
While horse and hero fell,
They that had fought so wéll
Came through the jaws of dèath,
Back | from the mouth of hèll,
- ¹⁵ All that was left of them ;
Left of six hundred.

11. Imitative action of swiftly drawing and waving a sword, whirling it round and downwards to the right side on "sabring."

12. Great emphasis on "reel'd."

13. Slow and mournful.

14. Similar to stanza 3.

15. Mournful.

¹⁶ When can their glory fàde ?
Oh, the wild chàrge they made !
 All the world wonder'd.
Hònour the charge they made !
 Honour the Light Brigàde,
 Noble six hundred !

Tennyson.

This selection should be read with great animation and boldness. As it demands all the greatest powers of the voice, it is a good exercise for simultaneous practice.

VI. HAMLET'S SOLILOQUY ON SUICIDE AND DEATH.

The feeling in Hamlet's mind is one of weariness of life, dislike of action, and hatred of wrong, but pervaded by a sentiment of solemnity induced by a dread of "something after death." The movement is not rapid, and the manner is earnest without excitement. Especially avoid declamation.

¹ Hamlet.—To bé, or nòt to bè : thát is the question :

Whether 'tìs noblér in the mínd| to suffer
 The stings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
 Or to take àrms| against a sea of troubles,
 And by oppósing| ènd thèì ? To die,—to sleep,—²
 No móre ; and| by a sleep| to say we end
 The heartàche, and the thousand natural shòcks
 That flesh is hèir tó,—'tis a consummation ³

16. High orotund exulting tone sustained, to the last word.

1. Commence low and slowly, as if thinking aloud.

2. "To die," uttered slowly as if pondering the thought. "To sleep," uttered in a higher tone, as if it satisfactorily solved the great doubt ; while "no more" with a rising inflection completes the utterance of that satisfaction.—"Death is no more than a sleep."

3. Higher tone, expressive of relief and triumph.

Devoutly to be wish'd. To díe, to sléep ;⁴
 To sléep ! perchance to dream ;—ay, thère's the rúb ;
 For | in that sleep of death | what dreams may come
 When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
 Must give us pàuse : there's the respect
 That makes calàmity of so long life :

• For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
 The oppressor's wròng, the proud man's contùmely,
 The pangs of despised love, the law's delày,
 The insolence of office, and the spurns
 That patient merit of the unworthy tákes,
 When he himself might his quietus máke
 With a bare bòdkin ? who would fàrdels bèar,
 To grunt and sweat under a weary life,

• But, that the dread of something after death,
 The undiscovered còuntry | from whose bóurne
 No traveller retúrns, puzzles the will ;
 And makes us rather | bear those ills | we have
 Than fly to others | that we know not of ?
 Thus consciénce | does make cowards of us all ;
 And thus | the native hue of resolution |
 Is sicklied o'er | with the pale cast of thought ;
 And enterprises of great pith and momènt,
 With this regàrd, their currents turn áwry,
 And lose the náme of àction. Shakespeare.

4. The second "to die, to sleep" is a more solemn reconsideration of the subject, delivered slowly and in deeper tones as the reality is breaking on his mind.

5. All from this line to "bare bodkin" is delivered with more passion and indignation, expressive of each of the evils under which man suffers. "Pangs of despised love" should be read with feeling, and tremor of voice, for very probably that moment Hamlet is thinking of Ophelia.

6. From this passage the tone is solemn, mournful and melancholy. Commence lower than the preceding line.

VII.

BOADICEA.

The following selection is one of the kind that induces singing, hence the reader must be guided by the suggestion of Section V.

Observe the pauses. Avoid giving too much weight to accent. Lengthen the time of the italicized words.

L. P. When | the British warrior queen,
 Bleeding from the Roman róds,
 Sought, with an indignant mlen,
 Counsel | of her country's gods,

Sage | beneath the spreading oak
 Sat the Druid, hoary chlef,
 Every burning word | he spóke,
 Full of ráge and full of grief.

M. P. “ Princéss ! if our aged eyés
 Weép | upon thy matchless wróngs,
 ’Tis because resentmént | tles
 All the terrors of our tongues.

H. P. “ Róme shall pèrish !—write that wórd
 In the blòod | that she has spilt ;
 Pèrish | hòpeless and abhòrr’d,
 Deep | in ruin | as in guilt.

“ Róme, for empire far renówn’d,
 Tràmples on a thousand stàtes ;
 Soon | her pride shall kiss the ground—
 Hark ! the Gaùl is at her gates.

“Other Romans shall arise,
Heèdless of a soldier's náme ;
Sòunds, not árms, shall win the prize,
Harmony, the path to fàme.

“Then | the progeny that springs
From the forests of our lánd,
Arm'd with thùnder, clad with wings,
Shall a wider world | command.

“Regions | Cæsar never knèw,
Thy posterity shall swáy ;
Where his eagles | never fléw,
None invincible as thèy.”

M.P. Such the bard's prophetic words,
Pregnant with celestial fire,
Bending | as he swept the chòrds
Of his sweet but awful lyre.

Shé, with all a monarch's pride,
Felt them in her bosom glòw,
Rush'd to battle, fought, and died ;
Dying, hurl'd them | at the foe.

H.P. Rùffians, pitiless as próud,
Heaven awards the vengeance dùe ;
Empire is on ús bestów'd,
Shàme and rùin wait for you,

VIII.

FROM KING HENRY VIII.

Wolsey and Cromwell.—Act III. Sc. 2.

WOL. ¹ Farewèll, a long farewèll to all my greatnèss !
 This | is the state of mán : To-dáy | he puts fòrth
 The tender leáves of hòpe, to-morrow | blòssoms,
 And bears his blushing honours | thick | upon him.
 The third day comes a fròst, a killing frost ;
 And, when he thinks, good, easy man, full sùrely
 His greatness is a ripeníng, nips his root,
² And then he fàlls, as I do. I have ventùred, ³
 Like little wanton boys | that swim on bladdèrs,
 This many summers | in a sea of glòry,
 But far beyond my depth : my high-blown príde
 At length bròke under me, and now has left mé,
Weary and old with servíce, to the mercy
 Of a rude stréam, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hàte ye ;
 I feel my heart new open'd. Oh, how wrètched ⁴
 Is that poor mán | that hangs on prínces' favours !
 There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire tó,
 That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruín,
 More pangs and féars | than wars or women have ;
 And when he falls, he falls like Lúcifer,
Never to hope agàin.

⁵ Hèar mè, Crómwell ;

And, when I am forgóttén, as I shall be,

1. Begin L.P., median stress, slow movement and mournful expression.

2. Deep and solemn ; pause after "falls," as if contemplating bitterly his own fall.

3. Read the simile in a higher or lower pitch than the metaphor, making the metaphor the leading and more solemn thought.

4. Begin "Oh" mournfully but passionately, as suffering under a sense of injustice.

5. The speech to Cromwell is given with dignity and all the fulness of the orotund voice. Begin in L.P.

And sleep | in dull | cold márble, where no mention
 Of me mòre | must be héard óf, say, I taught thee ;
 Say, Wolsèy, that once trod the ways of glòry,
 And sounded all the depths and shoals of hónour,
Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to risè in ;
 A sure and safe one, though thy máster míss'd it.
 Mark but my fàll, and that that ruin'd me.
 • Cromwell, I charge thée, fling away AMBITION ;
 By thàt sín|| fell the angèls ; how can màn then,
The image of his Màker, hope to wín by it ?
 Love thysèlf làst : cherish those héarts that hàte thee ;
Corruption wins not more | than honesty.
 Still in thy right hánd|| carry gentle pèace,
 To silence envious tongùes. Be jùst, and féar nòt ;
 Let all the ends thou aim'st at|| be thy còuntry's,
 Thy Gód's, and trùth's ; then|| if thou fall'st, O Crómwell,
 Thou fall'st a blessed màrtyr ! Serve the king ;
 And,|| prithèe, lead me in :
 There, take an inventory of all I have,
 To the last penny ; 'tis the king's : my robe,
 And my integrity to Heaven, is all
 I dare now call my own. O Cromwèll, CROMWELL !
 Had I but served my God | with half the zeal
 I served my kíng, He would not in mine age
 Have left me | naked | to mine enemies.

Shakespeare.

6. Increased solemnity and grandeur of tone to the words "And, prithee." Here Wolsey grows faint in action and voice, but resumes power in the closing sentences, "O Cromwell," &c.

IX.

THE DYING GLADIATOR.

[Indignant sympathy and impassioned appeal. M. and H. P. Median and Thorough Stress; last two lines high, loud and impassioned.]

“I see before me the gladiator lie;
 He leans upon his hànd—his manly brów
 Consents to déath, but conquers agòny !
 And his droop’d head|| sinks|| gradually|| low—
 And, through his side the last dròps | ebbing | slów,
 From the red gásh, fall heavy, one|| by òne,
 Like the first of a thunder-shower ; and nów
 The arena swims around him,—he is gone
 Ere ceased the inhuman shóut|| which hail’d the wretch|| who won.

“He héard it, but he hèeded nòt,—his eyès
 Were with his heàrt, and that was far away ;
 He reck’d not|| of the lifé he lost, nor príze,
 But where his rude hut by the Danube lay.
There|| were his young bàrbarians all at play,
There|| was their Dacian mother,—he their síre
Butcher’d to make a Roman holiday,—
 All this rush’d with his blood,—shall he expire,
 And unavénged ? Arise ! ye Goths, and glut your ire !”

X.

THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO.

¹ There was a sound of rèvelry by night,
 And Belgium’s capital | had gather’d thén

1. Begin in a cheerful, lively tone, M. P., but utter “hush ! hark !” in a deep tone, half whisper, of terror, and the remainder of the line solemn, slow, and deep, slightly rising on “knell.”

Her béauty and her chivàlry, and bríght
 The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave mèn;
 A thousand hearts | beat happily; and wén
 Music aróse | with its voluptuous swéll,
 Soft eyes look'd lòve | to eyes which spake again,
 And all went merry as a marriage bell;
 But húsh! hàrk! a deep| sound| strikes|| like a rising knèll!

² Did ye not héar it?—Nò; 'twas but the wínd,
 Or the car | rattling o'er the stony stréet;
 On with the dànce! let joy be unconfined;
 No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure méet
 To chase the glowing hours with flying féet—

³ But hàrk! that heavy sound | breaks in | once mòre,
 As if the clòuds its echo would repeat;
 And nearer, clearer, deadlier than before!

⁴ Arm! Arm! it is—it is—the cànnon's opening roar!

Within a window'd niche of that high háll,
 Sate Brúnswick's fated chièftain; he did hear
 That sōund | the first amid the festivàl,
 And caught its tone with Dèath's prophetic ear;
 And when they smiled because he deem'd it néar,
His heart more truly knew that péal | too wèll,
 Which stretch'd his father | on a bloody bier,

⁶ And roused the vengeance | blood alone could quell:
 He rush'd into the field, and foremóst fighting, fèll!

2. Uttered slowly, as if listening; pause and utter "no" as if angry at the interruption.

3. Expression of terror.

4. Very loud and full toned.

5. Mournfully and slowly uttered to the fifth line.

6. Louder and quicker, with excited feeling.

⁷ Ah ! then and there was hurrying to and fró,
 And gathering teárs, and tremblings of distréss,
 And cheeks all pàle, which but an hour ágo
Blush'd at the praise of their own lòveliness ;
 And there were sudden pàrtíngs, such as préss
 The lífe from out young hearts, and choking síghs
 Which ne'er might be repéated ; who could gùess
 If ever mòre should mèet those mutual èyes,

⁸ Since upon night so swéet | such awful morn could ríse !

⁹ And there was mounting | in hot hàste ; the stèed,
 The mustering squàdron, and the clattering cár,
 Went pouring forward | with impetuous speed,
 And swiftly forming | in the ranks of wàr ;
 And the deep thùnder | peal on peal afàr ;
 And néar, the beat of the alarming drúm
Roused up the soldier | ere the morning star ;
 While throng'd the citizéns, with terror dùmb,

¹⁰ Or whispering with white líps—"The fòe ! They còme !
 They come !"

And wíld and hígh the "Cameron's gathering" ròse !
 The war-note of Lochiel, which Albyn's hills
 Have héard, and heard, tóo, have her Saxon fòes ;—
 How in the noon of night that pibroch thrills, Saváge and shrill ! But with the breath that fills

¹¹ Their mounta-in-pípe, so fill the mountainèers

7. Tremor of voice, and expression of sorrow and tenderness.

8. Deep, slow, and solemn.

9. This stanza must begin with the hurry of action indicated by the words.

10. Expression of terror, half whispering, with radical stress, "The foe," etc.

11. Loud and full orotund tone, with passion.

With the fierce native daring | that instils
The stirring memory of a thousand years,
And Evàn's, Donàld's, fáme | rings in each clansman's ears!

¹² And Ardennes waves above them | her green leaves,
Dewy with nature's tear-drops, as they pass,
Grieving, if aught inanimate e'er grieves,
Over the unreturning brave— alás !
Ere evening, to be trodden | like the grass |
Which now benéath them, but abòve shall grow
In its next verdure, when this fiery mass
Of living valóur, rolling on the fóe,
And burning with high hópe, shall moulder | cóld and lòw.

¹³ Last noon | beheld them | full of lusty life ;
Last eve | in Beauty's circle, proudly gay ;
The midnight brought the signal-sound of strife,—
The morn | the marshalling in arms,—the dáy |
Bàttle's magnificently stern array !
The thunder-clouds close o'er it, which when rént,
The earth is cover'd thick with òther cláy,
Which her òwn clay shall cover, héap'd and pènt,
Rìder and hóse,—friend, fóe | in one | red | burial | blent.

Byron.

XI.

THE GOOD PARSON.

Thus to relieve the wretched | was his pride,
¹ And even his FAÏLINGS | lean'd to virtue's side,
But | in his duty *pròmp*t at every call,
He wátch'd and wèpt, he práy'd | and fèlt for àll ;

12. Softness of tone ; tenderness of expression. 13. Firm and solemn tone to the end.

1. The reading must be calm and reverential, but marked by tenderness and pathos ; the movement slow, and the stress median, without force.

And | as a bird each fond endearment tries,
 To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the skies,
Hè tried each art, reproved each dull delay,
 Allured to brighter worlds, and LED the way.

² Beside the bed | where parting life was laid,
 And sorrow, guilt, and pain by turns dismay'd,
 The reverend champion | stood. At his control,
 Despair and anguish | fled the struggling soul;
Comfort came down | the trembling wretch | to raise,
 And his last | faltering | accents | whisper'd praise.

³ At church, with meek and unaffected grace,
 His looks | adorn'd the venerable place;
Truth | from HIS lips prevail'd with double sway,
 And fools who came to scoff, remain'd to pray.
 The service past, around the pious man,
 With steady zeal, each honest rustic | ran;
 Even CHILDREN | follow'd with endearing wile,
 And pluck'd his gown | to share the good man's smile,
 His ready smile | a parent's warmth | express'd,
 Their welfare pleased him, and their cares distress'd;
 To them | his heart, his love, his griefs were given,
 But all his serious thoughts | had rest in heaven.

⁴ As some tall cliff, that lifts its awful form,
 Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm;
 Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
 Eternal sunshine | settles on its head.

Goldsmith.

2. Lower pitch, solemn and reverential tone.

3. M. P.

4. As this simile is not parenthetic, and ascends in sublimity of sentiment, it should be read with more power and with orotund voice.

XII.

BARBARA FREITCHIE.

On that pleasant morn of the early fall
When Lee marched over the mountain wáll,
Over the mountains winding dówn,
Horse and foot, into Frederick tówn,

FORTY FLAGS with their crimson bárs,
FLAPP'D| in the morning wind ; the sún
Of noon| looked down, and saw not òne.

² Up rose old BARBARA FREITCHIE, thén
Bowed| with her fourscore years and ten:
Bravest of all in Frederick tówn,
She took up the flág| the mén hauled dówn ;
In her attic window the staff she sét,
To show that òNE he'art| was loyal yèt.

³ Up the street came the rebel trèad,
Stonewall Jackson riding ahead.
Under his slouched hát| left and right
He glànced ; the old flàg met his sìght.

⁴ " H à l t ! "—the dust-brown ranks stood fàst.
" F i r e ! " out blazed the rifle-blàst ;
It shivered the windòw, pane and sàsh :
It rent the bànnèr with seam and gàsh.

1. Commence with full tone M. P., and increase the force on " forty flags " and " flapp'd."

2. Firm, but with the slowness of age and the dignity of power conscious of being right. Rise in pitch on " Freitch—" and descend on —" ie."

3. Military precision and sternness, and imitative regularity in the utterance ; give a higher pitch to " tread " than " head."

4. " H à l t ! " and " F i r e ! " high, loud and slow.

- Quick*, as it fell from the broken staff,
 Dame Barbara snatched the silken scarf;
 5 She leaned far out on the window sill
 And shook it forth | with a royal will.
 6 “Shoot, if you must, this old GREY head,
 But spare your country’s FLAG,” she said.
 7 A shade of sadness, a blush of shame,
 Over the face of the leader came;
 The nobler nature within him stirred
 To LIFE at that woman’s deed and word:
 8 “Who touches a hair of yon grey head
 Dies like a dog! March on!” he said.

J. G. Whittier.

XIII.

PATRIOTIC FIRE.

(Explosive orotund, Radical stress, High pitch, Great passion.)

What! while our arms can wield these blades
 Shall we die tamely? die alone?
 Without one victim to our shades—
One Moslem heart, where, buried deep
 The sabre | from its toil may sleep?
No--Gód of Ivan’s burning skies!
 Thou scorn’st th’ inglorious sacrifice.
No—though of all earth’s hope bereft,
Life, swords, and VENGEANCE STILL are left.

5. Tremor of age, but very excited and enthusiastic on “shook” and “royal will.”

6. High and fervid on “shoot.” Pathos and great earnestness of appeal, with tremor, on “Spare your country’s flag.”—Why should “shoot” have a falling and “flag” a rising inflection?

7. Suppressed warmth.

8. High and loud, with the sternness of command.

We'll make our valley's reeking caves
Live|| in the awe-struck minds of mén,
 Till tyrants shùdder, when their slaves
 Tell of the Ghebers' bloody glen.
Follow,|| brave hearts, this pile remains
 Our refúge still—from life and chàins ;
 But his the best, the holiest bed,
 Who sinks entomb'd | in Moslem dead. |

Moore.

XIV.

BRUTUS AND CASSIUS.

Cassius. CHASTISEMENT ?

Brutus. Remember Màrch, the IDES of M'rch, remember.

Did not great Julius | bléed | for 's sake ?
 What villain | touched his back, that did stab .
 And not for JUSTICE? Whát ! shall one of ús
 (That struck the foremost man of all this world
 But for supporting róbbers)—shall wé nów||
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
 And sell the mighty space of our large honours
 For so much trásh|| as may be grasped thús ?
 I had rather be a DOG, and bày the moòn
 Than such a Roman.

Shakespeare.

XV.

HENRY V.

(High orotund.)

Fight, gentlemen of England ! fight, bold yeomen ;
Dràw, àrchers, draw your arrows to the heàd :
 Spur your proud horses hàrd, and ride in blòod ;
AMAZE the wèlkin with your broken staves.

A thousand hearts|| are great within my bosom ;
 ADVANCE OUR STANDARDS, SET upon our FOES
 Our ancient word of courage ; fair Saint GEORGE,
Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dràgons !
 UPON THEM ! VICTORY sits upon our helm.

Shakespeare.

XVI. CORIOLANUS DEFYING THE ROMAN POPULACE.

(Great force, High pitch, Inflections extend over a fifth, Movement quick.)

Let them pull àll about mine ears ; present me
 DEATH|| on the wheèl, or at wild horses' heels ;
 Or pile TEN HILLS|| on the Tarpeïan rock,
 That the precipitation might down strétch
 Below the beam of sight ; yet will I still
 BE THUS|| to them.

Shakespeare.

Religious and Scripture Extracts.

The Scriptures, rich in eloquence, poetry and profound thought, present the finest exercises for expressive reading. The general style of reading the Bible is marked not only by great defects, but by a peculiar mannerism heard in reading no other class of composition. It should be observed as a fixed rule that the Scriptures have no style of their own for reading. They must be read as we read the loftiest passages of any great poet or orator ; as we read Milton or Shakespeare ; only that the Scriptures demand a profounder reverence and solemnity than the works of any human authors. The hurry and monotony of school reading or the peculiar tones of pulpit delivery are alike opposed to all principles of good reading, and especially of the Holy Scriptures. The same rules must be applied to reading all sacred lyrics or hymns. Hence it is thought advisable to introduce these extracts with a passage from Milton, an extract from a sermon, and a hymn.

GOD'S PROVIDENCE.

“Thy footsteps are not known.”—Ps. lxxvii. 19.

God| móves| in a mysterious wáy
 His wonders| to perfòrm ;
 He plants His footstèps| in the séa,
 And rídes| upon the stòrm.
 Deep| in unfathomable mînes
 Of never-failing skill,
 He treasures up His bright designs,
 And works| His sovereign| will.
 Ye fearful saints, fresh còurage take ;
 The clouds| ye so much| dréad
 Are big| with mèrcy and shall bréak
 In blèssings| on your hèad.
 Judge| not| the LÓRD by feeble sènsè,
 But trúst Him| for His gràce ;
 Behind a fròwnìng providéncè
 He hides| a smiling fàce.
 Blind unbelief | is sùre to èrr,
 And scan His work| in vàin ;
 God | is His òwn interpreter,
 And Hé| will make it plàin.

Cowper.

In reading the above hymn, study to avoid sing-song. This may be accomplished, (1) by dwelling longer on the italicized words, (2) by avoiding too strong accentuation on accented syllables, (3) by frequent pauses, especially where marked by the upright dash.

ANGELIC PRAISE TO GOD.

(Orotund throughout, Pitch varied, Median stress.)

“ Great are thy wórks, JEHOVAH ! infinite

Thy pòwer ! What thought can meàsure thée, or tóngue

Relàte thèe ? Greater now | in thy retúrn |

Than from the giant angèls ; thée | that dáy

Thy thùnders magnified ; but to créate

Is grèater than créated | to destròy.

Who can impàir thèe, Mighty Kìng, or bound

Thy empire ? Easily the proud attempt

Of spirits apostáte, and their counsels váin,

Thou hast repéll'd ; while impiously they thought

Thée | to dimínish, and from thee | withdraw

The number of thy wòrshippèrs. Who seeks

To lessen thée | agàinst his purpóse | sérves

To manifest | the more thy mìght : his evíl

Thou usèst, and from thence | createst mòre goòd.

Witness this new-made wòrld, another heàven

From heaven-gate not fàr, founded in viéw

On the clear hyaline, the glassy sèa,

Of amplitude almost immènse, with stars

Nùmerous, and every stàr, perhaps, a wòrld

Of destined habitation ; but thou know'st

Their sèasons : among these | the seat of mèn,

Eàrth | with her nether ocean circumfúsed,

Their pleasant dwelling-plàce. Thrice happy mèn |

And sóns of mén, whom God hath thus advánced !
 Created in his ìmage, there to dwell
 And wòrship him ; and in reward to rùle
 Over his wòrks, on eàrth, in sea, or air,
 And multiply a ràce of worshippers
 Hóly and júst : thrice háppy, if they know
 Their happiness | and persevere upright !"

XIX.

CHRISTIAN ASSURANCE.

"Simon, Simon, Satan hath desired to winnow thee | as wheat ;" here is our toil : " but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not ;" this is our safety. No man's condition so sure as ours : the prayer of Christ | is mòre than sufficient | both to strengthen us, be we never so wéak ; and to overthrow all adversary power, be it never so strong and pòtent. His *práy*er must not exclude our labòur. Their thoughts are vàin, who think that their watching can preserve the city | which God himself | is not willing to kèep. And are not theirs as vàin, who think that God will keep the city, for which they themselves | are not careful to wàtch ? The husbandman may not therefore burn his plough, nor the merchant forsake his tràde, because God hath promised, "I will not forsake thee." And do the promises of God, concerning our stability, think you, make it a matter indifferent for ús to úse or not to use the means whereby | to attend or not to attend | to redíng ? to práy or not to práy, that we fall not into temptátion ? Surely | if we look to stand in the faith of the sons of Gód, we must hourly, continually, be providing, and setting ourselves to stríve. It was not the meaning of our Lord and Savióur, in saying, " Father, keep them in thy Náme," that we should be careless to keep ourselves. To our own sáfety, our own sedùlity is required. And then | blessed for ever and ever | be that mother's child, whose faith hath made him the child of Gód. The earth may shàke

the pillars of the world may tremble under ùs : the co untenance of the heaven may be appalled ; the sun may lose his light, the moon | her beàuty, the stars their glóry : but | concerning the man | who trusteth in Gód, if the fire have proclaimed itself unable as much as to singe a hair of his héud ; if liòns, beasts ravenous by nàture, and keen with hùnger, being set to devóur, have, as it were, religiously adored the very flesh of the faithful mán ; what is there in the world | that shall chánge, his heàrt, overthréw his faith, alter his affèction towards Gód, or the affection of Gód to hìm ? If I be of this note, who shall make a separation between me and my Gód ? Shall tribulátion, or ánguish, or persècution, or fámine, or nákedness, or péril, or swòrd ? Nò ; I am persuaded that neither tribulátion, nor ánguish, nor persecútion, nor fámine, nor nakèdness, nor péril, nor swòrd, nor déath, nor life, nor ángels, nor principálties, nor pòwers, nor things présent, nor things to còme, nor heíght, nor dèpth, nor any other créature | shall ever prevail so far over me. I know in whom I have BELIEVED ; I am not ignorant | whose precious blood | hath been shèd for me ; I have a Shepherd | full of kindnèss, full of càre, and full of pòwer : unto Hím | I commit myself ; his own finger hath engraven this sentence | in the tábles of my heàrt : “ Satan hath desired | to WINNOW thee | as WHEAT : but I have prayed that thy fáith fáil nòt.” Therefore the assurance of my hópe, I will labour to kéep | as a JEWEL unto the end ; and by lábour, through the gracious mediation of His práyer, I SHALL keep it. Hooker.

A PARABLE.

The reading of the following parable should be simple, unaffected, undeclamatory, and free from peculiar intonation ; but as it is dialogue, involving a great principle of charity, it ought to be earnest and dramatic in the impersonation of the speakers :—

MATT. XVIII.—Therefore is the kingdom of heaven| likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him which owed him ten thousand talènts. But| forasmuch as he had not to páy, his lord commanded him to be sòld, and his wife and children, and all that he hàd, and payment to be made. The servant therefore fell down and worshipped him, saying, Lórd, have patience with mé, and I will pay thee àll. Then the lord of that servant was moved with compàssion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt. But the same servant| went out, and found one of his fellow-servants, which owed him an hundred pence ; and he laid hànds on him, and took him by the thròat, saying, Pày me| that thou owest. And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with mé, and I will pay thee àll. And he would nòt : but went and cast him into prison till he should pay the debt. So| when his fellow-servants saw what was dóne, they were very sòrry, and came and told unto their lord| all that was done. Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thée àll that debt, because thou desirest me : shouldst not thou also have had compassion| on thy fellow-servánt even as I had pity on thée ?

XXIII.

ARGUMENT.

(Earnest but not impassioned, M. P., Calm but not too slow.)

What shall we then sáy to these things ? If Gòd be fór ús, whò can be agàinst us ? He| that spared not his ówn Són, but delivered Him up for us all, hów shall he not | with him alsó | freely give ús | all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elèct? It is Gód that justifieth. Who is he that condèmneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercèssion for us. Who shall separàte us | from the love of Christ? Shall tribuláti^on, or distréss, or persecúti^on, or fámine, or nakednéss, or peril, or swórd (or swórd)? As it is wríttén, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as shéep for the slaughtèr.

Nay, in all these things we are móre than conquérors, through him | that loved ús. For I am persuaded that neither déath, nor life, nor ángels, nor princípalities, nor pówers, nor things présent, nor things to cóme, nor héight nor dèpth, nor any other créature || shall be able to separate us | from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.—Romans viii.

(Movement slow, Deep orotund, Pitch varied.)

XXIV. Behold, I show you a mystèry; we shall not all sléep, but we shall be chànged, in a mòment, in the twínkling of an eye, at the last trúmp^t:¹ for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be ráised | incorrùptible, and we shall be chànged.² For this corrùptible | must put on incorruption, and this mórtal must put on immórtality. So when this corrùptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immórtality || then shall be brought to pass the saying | that is wríttén,—³ DEATH is swallowèd úp | in VICTORY.⁴ O dēāth | where is thy sting? O grave | where is thy victory? The sting of déath | is sin, and the strength of sin is the lāw.⁵ But thanks be to Gód | which giveth us the victory through our LORD JESUS CHRIST.

1. High pitch.

2. Deeper and more solemn.

3. High and exultant.

4. Deep and slow.

5. High and exultant.

XXV.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

(Tone reverential, Middle and low pitch—never high, Median stress, Movement slow, varied with pathos.)

Our FATHER|| which art in Heáven,|| HALLOWED be thy nàme.
Thy kìngdom còme. Thy wìll be done ón éarth,|| às it is in Heáven. Gìve us this dáy|| our daily brèàb. And fòrgive us
 our trèspasses, as wè fòrgìve||thèm that trèspass against ùs.^{*}
 And leàd us nót | into tètemptation, but delivér us from evìl : for | thìne | is the kìngdom, and the pòwèr, and the glóry|| for ever and èver. Amen.†

^{*}Caution.—Avoid giving, as many do, the emphasis of sense to “against” instead of “us.” The word “trespass” implies against, and the words “them” and “us” are contrasted.

† Amen. The Italian broad A, as in calm, is far more impressive than A as in gale. No good vocalist sings Amen in the latter style, because the first allows more grandeur and beauty to the voice.

Practise a class in reciting the whole prayer by themselves, as explained above.

EXAMINATION PAPERS.

Method of Answering.

1. The extract given for examination should be written on paper from the printed copy.

2. The inflections should be marked according to the method used in this book.

3. The pauses can be marked with an upright dash made between the words where the pause occurs, one, two or three dashes being used according to the required length of the rhetorical pause.

4. Emphasis can be indicated according to the printers' rule; viz., the emphatic word must be underlined in the following way :

Emphasis of sense, one line—italics.

Emphasis of feeling, two lines—small capitals.

Emphasis of feeling (extraordinary)—three lines—capitals.

5. When the question refers to the Modulation or Pitch, it may be answered by italicizing the passage, and writing on the margin opposite to its commencing word, L.P., M.P., or H.P., as may be determined by the pupil.

6. The Stress may be indicated by a mark written over the word, thus :—

Radical stress, arm.

Median stress, fire.

Vanishing stress, I won't.

7. When the question is one bearing on the spirit or the meaning of a passage, it must be written in the language of the student.

Indicate the inflections in the following passages by the usual marks, the emphatic words by marking in italics, and pauses by the dash :—

XXVI. The scene was changed. It was an eve of raw and surly mood,

And in a turret-chamber high of ancient Holyrood

Sat Mary, listening to the rain, and sighing with the winds

That seem'd to suit the stormy state of men's uncertain minds.

The touch of care had blanch'd her cheek—her smile was sadder now,

The weight of royalty had press'd too heavy on her brow ;

And traitors to her councils came, and rebels to the field ;

The Stuart sceptre well she sway'd, but the sword she could not wield.

She thought of all her blighted hopes—the dreams of youth's brief day,

And summoned Rizzio with his lute, and bade the minstrel play

The songs she loved in early years—the songs of gay Navarre,

The songs perchance that erst were sung by gallant Chatelar ;

They half beguiled her of her cares, they soothed her into smiles,

They won her thoughts from bigot zeal and fierce domestic broils :—

But hark ! the tramp of armèd men ! the Douglas' battle-cry !

They come—they come!—and lo ! the scowl of Ruthven's hollow eye !

And swords are drawn, and daggers gleam, and tears and words are vain—

The ruffian steel is in his heart—the faithful Rizzio's slain !
 Then Mary Stuart dash'd aside the tears that trickling fell :
 “ Now for my father's arm ! ” she said ; “ my woman's heart, farewell ! ” Bell.

Indicate the emphatic tie by grouping, in the following passages, the words related in italics :—

XXVII. Art thou that traitor-angel, art thou he Who first broke peace in Heaven, and faith till then
 Unbroken ; and in proud rebellious arms
 Drew after him the third part of Heaven's sons, Conjured against the Highest ?

XXVIII. Say, first, for Heaven hides nothing from thy view,
 Nor the deep tract of hell.

XXIX. Me, though just right and the fixed laws of Heaven
 Did first create your leader ; yet this loss,
 Thus far at least recover'd, has much more Established.

Note.—In grouping, the relation of words is shown by delivering the related passages in a similar pitch and tone of voice. When more than a leading group is to be indicated, the leading group may be marked in capitals or small capitals, the next subordinate group in italics, and the lowest group in common letters.

Selections from Goldsmith's “ Deserted Village.”

XXX. THE VILLAGE PREACHER.

Mark the inflections of italicized words.

Mark the rhetorical pauses in lines 2, 5, 6, 7, 11, 12, 24, 25, 26.

Mark the emphatic words in lines 2, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 22, 24, 26, and give them their proper inflections.

In the first four lines how would you distinguish, (1) the modulations of the principal sentence from the subordinate sentences, (2) the modifying members of the principal sentence from the subject and predicate?

What feeling should predominate in lines 9 and 10, and what feeling should succeed in the lines that follow to the end of line 14?

In what spirit should the lines describing the characters introduced into the succeeding lines be delivered?

How should lines 21 and 22 be distinguished and read, so as to realize the pictures?

1. Near yonder copse, where once the garden smiled,
2. And still where many a garden-flower grows wild,
3. There, where a few torn shrubs the place disclose,
4. The village preacher's modest mansion rose.
5. A man he was to all the country dear,
6. And passing rich with forty pounds a year ;
7. Remote from towns he ran his godly race,
8. Nor e'er had changed, nor wish'd to change, his place ;
9. Unskilful he to fawn, or seek for power,
10. By doctrines fashion'd to the varying hour :
11. Far other aims his heart had learn'd to prize,
12. More bent to raise the wretched than to rise.
13. His house was known to all the vagrant train—
14. He chid their wanderings, but relieved their pain ;
15. The long-remember'd beggar was his guest,
- 16 Whose beard, descending, swept his aged breast ;

17. The ruin'd spendthrift, now no longer proud,
18. Claim'd kindred there, and had his claims allow'd ;
19. The broken soldier, kindly bid to stay,
20. Sat by his fire, and talk'd the night away,
21. Wept o'er his wounds, or, tales of sorrow done,
22. Shoulder'd his crutch, and show'd how fields were won.
23. Pleased with his guests, the good man learn'd to glow.
24. And quite forgot their vices in their woe ;
25. Careless their merits or their faults to scan,
26. His pity gave ere charity began.

XXXI. THE LATTER END OF A VIRTUOUS LIFE.

Mark the inflections of the italicized words.

Mark the rhetorical pauses in lines 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16.

What passages in the succeeding lines can be grouped, i. e., read in the same pitch and otherwise similarly with "How blest is he," line 3 ?

How would you distinguish by modulation the clause in line 6 from that in which the previous line and succeeding part of the same it modifies ?

Mark the emphatic words in lines 1, 6, 10, 11, 12, 14, 16, and give them their proper inflections.

1. O blest retirement, friend to life's decline,
2. Retreats from care that never must be mine,
3. How blest is he who crowns in shades like these,
4. A youth of labour with an age of ease ;
5. Who quits a world where strong temptations try,
6. And since 'tis hard to combat, learns to fly !
7. For him no wretches, born to work and weep,
8. Explore the mine, or tempt the dangerous deep ;

9. No surly porter stands in guilty state,
10. To spurn imploring famine from the gate.
11. But on he moves to meet his latter end,
12. Angels around befriending virtue's friend :
13. Sinks to the grave with unperceived decay,
14. While resignation gently slopes the way ;
15. And all his prospects brightening to the last,
16. His heaven commences ere the world be past.

XXXII.

INVOCATION TO POETRY.

Mark the inflections of italicized words.

Mark the rhetorical pauses in lines 2, 3, 9, 13, 17, 18, 19, 21, . 23, 24.

What feeling should predominate in reading the first ten lines, and how should the apodosis be distinguished from the previous members of the invocation ?

With which lines and clauses must "Farewell, and O !" in the 11th line, be grouped, and how shall the group be distinguished from the intervening clauses ?

How would you pronounce "the" instead of "th'" before "inclement," in 16th line, without violating the metre ?

In the 19th line how could it be shown in reading that "states of native strength possess" does not designate simple possession ; and with which members of the sentence must "Though very poor" be grouped ?

How would you deliver the similes in lines 22 and 24 ? Why should it be an exception to the rule for delivering similes ? Give the rule.

Mark the emphatic words in lines 1, 3, 4, 8, 10, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 23, 24, and give them their proper inflections.

1. And thou, sweet Poetry, thou loveliest maid,
2. Still first to fly where sensual joys invade,
3. Unfit in these degenerate times of shame,
4. To catch the heart, or strike for honest fame ;
5. Dear, charming nymph, neglected and decried,
6. My shame in crowds, my solitary pride.
7. Thou source of all my bliss and all my woe,
8. That found'st me poor at first, and kept'st me so ;
9. Thou guide by which the nobler arts excel,
10. Thou nurse of every virtue, fare thee well !
11. Farewell, and O ! where'er thy voice be tried,
12. On Torno's cliffs, or Pambamarca's side,—
13. Whether where equinoctial fervours glow,
14. Or winter wraps the polar world in snow,
15. Still let thy voice, prevailing over time,
16. Redress the rigors of th' inclement clime ;
17. Aid slighted Truth with thy persuasive strain ;
18. Teach erring man to spurn the rage of guin ;
19. Teach him that states of native strength possest,
20. Though very poor, may still be very blest ;
21. That trade's proud empire hastes to swift decay,
22. As oceans sweep the labour'd mole away ;
23. While self-dependent power can time defy,
24. As rocks resist the billows and the sky.

XXXIII.

LUXURY.

Mark the inflections on italicized words.

Mark the rhetorical pauses in lines 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 10.

Group by modulation the leading words of lines 5 and 6.

Mark the emphatic words | the emphasis of sense in italics, and of feeling in small capitals | in lines 1, 2, 4, 5, 8, 10, and mark the inflection appropriate to the emphasis of feeling.

1. O luxury ! thou cursed by Heaven's decree,
2. How ill exchanged are things like these, for thee !
3. How do thy potions with insidious joy
4. Diffuse thy pleasures only to destroy !
5. Kingdoms by thee, to sickly greatness grown,
6. Boast of a florid vigour not their own ;
7. At every draught more large and large they grow,
8. A bloated mass of rank, unwieldy woe ;
9. Till sapp'd their strength and every part unsound,
10. Down, down they sink and spread a ruin round.

XXXIV.

MARCO BOZZARIS.

In the following stanza, what inflection must be given to the italic words? Give your reasons.

What word takes the leading emphasis in the 4th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th lines ?

State where the rhetorical pauses occur in the 2nd, 4th and 7th lines.

What variation should be made in the modulations of the 3rd and 4th lines? Give your reasons.

1. At midnight, in his guarded tent,
2. The Turk was dreaming of the hour
3. When Greece, her knee in suppliance bent,
4. Should tremble at his power ;
5. In dreams, through coast and camp, he berç
6. The trophies of a conqueror;

7. In dreams his song of triumph heard ;
8. Then wore his monarch's signet ring ;
9. Then press'd that monarch's throne—a king ;
10. As wild his thoughts, and gay of wing,
11. As Eden's garden bird.

XXXV. FROM MARK ANTONY'S SPEECH.

Mark the inflections of the italicized words, and give your reasons.

Mark the emphatic words in the following lines ; state if they should have the emphasis of sense or of feeling, and indicate their appropriate inflection ; viz., lines 2, 7, 12, 14, 17, 19, 20, 24, 31, 37, 41, 42, 43, 45, 47, 48, 51, 52, 59, 63, 64.

With what expression of feeling does Antony speak the lines 9, 10 and 11, and what difference in the modulation of lines 10 and 11 ?

In line 27, Antony suggests doubt of the "honourable" character of the assassins of Cæsar. Give the appropriate inflections to "sure"—"honourable man."

How should Antony begin lines 36 to 40 ?

What expression follows in the succeeding lines ?

What changes of modulation (pitch) distinguish lines 53, 54, 55, 56 ?

Which words take the higher and which the lower pitch ?

What feeling does Antony wish to arouse with the words "Which all the while ran blood," and what modulation should be given to them ?

Indicate the rhetorical pauses in lines 3, 15, 21, 29, 35, 38, 41, 42, 43, 50.

- Antony.*—Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears ;
2. I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him.
 3. The evil that men do lives after them ;
 4. The good is oft interr'd with their bones ;
 5. So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus
 6. Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious ;
 7. If it were so, it was a grievous fault ;
 8. And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.
 9. Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,
 10. (For Brutus is an honourable man ;
 11. So are they all, all honourable men,)
 12. Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.
 13. He was my friend, faithful and just to me :
 14. But Brutus says he was ambitious :
 15. And Brutus is an honourable man.
 16. He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
 17. Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill :
 18. Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious ?
 19. When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept
 20. Ambition should be made of sterner stuff !
 21. Yet Brutus says he was ambitious :
 22. And Brutus is an honourable man.
 23. You all did see, that on the Lupercal
 24. I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
 25. Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition ?
 26. Yet Brutus says he was ambitious :
 27. And, sure, he is an honourable man.
 28. I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
 29. But here I am to speak what I do know.

30. You all did love him once—not without cause;
31. What cause withholds you then to mourn for him ?
32. O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts,
33. And men have lost their reason. Bear with me ;
34. My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar,
35. And I must pause till it come back to me.
36. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
37. You all do know this mantle : I remember
38. The first time ever Cæsar put it on ;
39. 'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,
40. That day he overcame the Nervii ;—
41. Look ! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through :
42. See ! what a rent the envious Casca made :
43. Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd ;
44. And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,
45. Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,
46. As rushing out of doors, to be resolved
47. If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no ;
48. For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel :
49. Judge, O ye gods, how dearly Cæsar loved him !
50. This was the most unkindest cut of all :
51. For, when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
52. Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
53. Quite vanquish'd him : then burst his mighty heart ;
54. And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
55. Even at the base of Pompey's statue,
56. Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.
57. Oh, what a fall was there, my countrymen !
58. Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
59. While bloody treason flourish'd over us.

- 60 Oh ! now you weep ; and, I perceive, you feel
 61. The dint of pity : these are gracious drops.
 62. Kind souls, what, weep you, when you but behold
 63. Our Cæsar's vesture wounded ? Look you here,
 64. Here is himself, marr'd as you see, by traitors.

XXXVI. SELECTIONS FROM MACBETH.

In the following speech explain the prevailing sentiment in Macbeth's mind.

Mark the inflections of the italicized words, and give your reasons.

Point out the words requiring emphasis in the following lines : 3, 7, 8, 10, 12, 13, 14, 15, 19, 27, and mark the proper inflections.

From the 21st line to the word "wind" in the 25th line, distinguish the group of words that take a higher pitch and a stronger emphasis from those which are subordinate.

Supposing the first line were to finish at "well," and "quickly" should be dependent on the words that follow, what change would take place in the inflections of "well" and "quickly," and how would the change affect the meaning of the passage ? *

Mark the rhetorical pauses in lines 7, 9, 14, 15, 19.

Suppose the comma after "besides," in line 16, were put after "this" instead, what effect would the transfer make in the sense and require in the reading ?

1. Macbeth. If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well
2. It were done quickly : if the assassination

* This was the reading of Mr. Macready, the celebrated tragedian.

3. Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
4. With his surcease success ; that but this blow
5. Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
6. But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
7. We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
8. We still have judgment here ; that we but teach
9. Bloody instructions, which being taught return
10. To plague the inventor : this even-handed justice
11. Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
12. To our own lips. He 's here in double trust ;
13. First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
14. Strong both against the deed ; then, as his host,
15. Who should against his murderer shut the door,
16. Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan
17. Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
18. So clear in his great office, that his virtues
19. Will plead like angels trumpet-tongued against
20. The deep damnation of his taking-off ;
21. And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
22. Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, horsed
23. Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
24. Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
25. That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur
26. To prick the sides of my intent, but only
27. Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself
28. And falls on the other.

Mark the inflections of all important words.

Which word takes the leading emphasis in the 2nd line ?
Give reasons for your selection.

Select the emphatic words in each of the succeeding lines.

What is the prevailing feeling in the mind of Macbeth as he speaks these words, and what qualities of voice should be exercised in delivering the whole, and especially the emphatic words of this passage ?

Collier puts "grief" for "stuff" in the 10th line. Why is "grief" not so expressive of the state of Lady Macbeth's mind as "stuff" ?

1. Macbeth. How does your patient, doctor ?
2. Doctor. Not so sick, my lord,
3. As she is troubled with thick coming fancies
4. That keep her from her rest.
5. Macbeth. Cure her of that.
6. Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased,
7. Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
8. Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
9. And with some sweet, oblivious antidote,
10. Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
11. Which weighs upon the heart ?

XXXVII. ABDIEL REBUKING SATAN.

Mark the inflections of the italicized words, and give your reasons.

Mark the emphatic words on lines 8, 19, 21, 33, 39. As the character of Abdiel is described in the last twelve lines, in what style, voice, stress and pitch should the passage be delivered ?

How will you distinguish the speech of Abdiel from the narrative part of the last twelve lines ?

Mark the rhetorical pauses in lines 9, 10, 13, 14, 18, 19.

Dr. Rush suggests that instead of a comma after "faithless," in the 21st line, there should be a full stop, and that the comma after "unterrified" should be a semicolon: what change would this make in the sense, and require in the reading?

What words will have the same inflection in line 17? Give your reason.

1. " O alienate from God, O spirit accursed,
2. Forsaken of all good ! I see thy fall
3. Determined, and thy hapless crew involved
4. In this perfidious fraud, contagion spread
5. Both of thy crime and punishment ; henceforth
6. No more be troubled how to quit the yoke
7. Of God's Messiah ; those indulgent laws
8. Will not be now vouchsafed ; other decrees
9. Against thee are gone forth without recall ;
10. That golden sceptre which thou didst reject
11. Is now an iron rod to bruise and break
12. Thy disobedience. Well thou didst advise ;
13. Yet not for thy advice or threats I fly
14. These wicked tents devoted ; lest the wrath,
15. Impendent, raging into sudden flame,
16. Distinguish not ; for soon expect to feel
- 17 His thunder on thy head, devouring fire.
18. Then who created thee lamenting learn.
19. When who can uncreate thee thou shalt know."
20. So spake the seraph Abdiel, faithful found
21. Among the faithless, faithful only he ;
22. Among innumerable false, unmoved,
23. Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified,

24. His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal ;
25. Nor number nor example with him wrought
26. To swerve from truth or change his constant mind,
27. Though simple. From amidst them forth he pass'd,
28. Long way, through hostile scorn, which he sustain'd
29. Superior, nor of violence feared aught ;
30. And, with retorted scorn, his back he turn'd
31. On those proud towers to swift destruction doom'd.

GOD'S APPROVAL OF ABDIEL'S LOYALTY.

32. Servant of God, well done ; well hast thou fought
33. The better fight, who single hast maintain'd
34. Against revolted multitudes the cause
35. Of truth, in word mightier than they in arms ;
36. And for the testimony of truth hast borne
37. Universal reproach, far worse to bear
38. Than violence ; for this was all thy care,
39. To stand approv'd in sight of God, though worlds
40. Judged thee perverse. Milton.

XXXVIII.

RHYTHM AND METRE.

Mark the rhythm in the following passage, according to rules in par. 238 :—

It is now sixteen or seventeen years since I saw the Queen of France, then the dauphiness, at Versailles ; and surely never lighted on this orb, which she hardly seemed to touch, a more delightful vision. I saw her just above the horizon, decorating and cheering the elevated sphere she just began to move in—glittering like the morning star, full of life, and splendour, and joy. Oh, what a revolution ! and what a heart must I have to contemplate without emotion that elevation and that fall ! Little did I dream, when she added titles of veneration to that enthusiastic, distant, respectful love, that she should ever be obliged to carry the sharp antidote against disgrace concealed in that bosom ; little did I dream that I should have lived to see such disasters fallen upon her in a nation of gallant men, in a nation of men of honour and of cavaliers. I thought ten thousand swords must have leaped from their scabbards to avenge even a look that threatened her with insult.

Burke.

I am the Resurrection and the life, saith the Lord ; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live ; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die.

I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.

Mark the metre in the following passages, according to pars. 238 and 244 :—

Where'er we tread, 'tis haunted, holy ground,
No earth of thine is lost in vulgar mould,
But one vast realm of wonder spreads around,
And all the Muse's tales seem truly told,
Till the sense aches with gazing to behold
The scenes our earliest dreams have dwelt upon ;
Each bill and dale, each deepening glen and wold,
Defies the power which crushed thy temples gone—
Age shakes Athena's tower, but spares gray Marathon.

Byron.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene,
 The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear ;
 Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
 And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

Gray.

Wizard.—Lochiel ! Lochiel ! beware of the day !
 For dark and despairing my sight I may seal,
 But man cannot cover what God would reveal ;
 'Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore,
 And coming events cast their shadows before.
 I tell thee, Culloden's dread echoes shall ring
 With the bloodhounds that bark for thy fugitive king.
 Lo ! anointed by Heaven with vials of wrath,
 Behold, where he flies on his desolate path !
 Now, in darkness and billows, he sweeps from my sight ;
 Rise ! Rise ! ye wild tempests, and cover his flight !
 'Tis finish'd ! Their thunders are hush'd on the moors ;
 Culloden is lost, and my country deplores.

ELEGY WRITTEN IN A COUNTRY CHURCHYARD.

The qualities of voice required to read this poem are the orotund, with occasional tremor where tenderness, pathos, or sorrow prevails ; the median or swelling stress, and a movement of medium measure, i. e., neither too fast nor too slow. As the poem is so decidedly meditative in character, frequent but not long pauses will add to the effect.

The curfew | tolls the knell of parting day,
 The lowing herd | winds slowly o'er the lea,

The ploughman| homeward plods his weary way,
L. P. And leaves the world| to darkness and to mè.

2.

Now fades| the glimmering landscape| on the sight,
And all the air| a solemn stillness holds,
Save| where the beetle | wheels his droning flight,
And drowsy tinklings| lull the distant folds :

3.

Save| that, from yonder ivy-mantled tower,
The moping owl| does to the moon complain
Of such as, wandering near her secret bowèr,
Molest her ancient| solitary rèign.

4.

Beneath those rugged élms, that yew-tree's sháde,
Where héaves the tùrf| in many a mouldering héap,
Each| in his narrow cell for ever láid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet| sleep.

5.

The breezy call of incense-breathing mòrn,
The swallow| twittering from the straw-built shèl,
The cock's shrill clarìon, or the echoing hòrn,
No more| shall rouse thém from their lowly béd.

6.

For thém| no more the blazing hearth shall búrn,
Or busy housewife| ply her evening càre ;
No childrén| run to lisp their sire's retúrn,
Or climb his knees| the envied kiss to shàre.

7.

Oft| did the harvest| to théir sickles yíeld,
 Their furrow oft| the stubborn glebe has bròke :
 How jocùnd| did they drive their team a-fièld !
 How bow'd the wòods| beneath their sturdy stroke !

Let not AMBITION| mock their useful tóil,
 Their homely jóys, and destiny obscúre ;
 Nor GRANDEUR hèar, with a disdainful smíle,
 The short and simple annals| of the pòor.

9.

The boast of HERALDRY, the pomp of pòwer,
 And all that beàuty, all that wéalth e'er gáve,
 Await alike| the inevitable hour—

L. P. The paths of glóry| lead but to the gràve.

10.

M. P. Nor yôu, ye prou'd ! impúte to thése the fàult,
 If memory| o'er their tómb| no trophies raise,

L. P. Where, through the long-drawn aisles and fretted vault,
 The pealing anthèm| swells the note of pràise.

11.

Can storied úrn, or animáted búst,
 Back to its mansion| call the fleeting bréath ?
 Can honóur's voíce| provoke the silent dust,
 Or flattery| sóothe the dull| cold ear of dèath ?

12.

H. P. Perhaps| in this neglected spot| is laid
 Some héart| once pregnant with celestial fire ;
Hànds| that the rod of empire| might have swà'y'd,
 Or waked to ecstàsy| the living lyre.

M. P. But Knowledge| to théir éyes| her ample páge,
Rich| with the spoils of tíme | did ne'er unròll ;
 L. P. Chill penùry reprèss'd their noble ráge,
 And fróze| the genial currént| of the sòul.

14.

M. P. Full many a gém of purest ray seréne
 The dark| unfathom'd caves of oceán| bèar ;
 Full many a flòw'r is born to blush unséén,
 And waste its sweetnéss on the desert àir.

15.

Some village Hàmpden, that with dauntless bréast
 The little tyrant of his fields| withstood ;
 Some mute| inglorious Milton| hère may rést ;
 Some Cromwéll, guiltless of his country's blòod.

Th' applause of list'ning senates| to command,
 The threats of pain and ruín| to desplse,
 To scatter plènty o'er a smiling lànd,
 And read their history| in a nation's éyes,

17.

Their ló't| forbàde : nor circumscrib'd alóne|
 Their growing virtues, but their crímes| confined ;

Forbade| to wade| through slaughter| to a throne,
And shut the gates of mercy| on mankind ;

18.

The struggling pangs of conscious truth| to hide :
To quench the blushes of ingenuous shame ;
Or heap the shrine of luxury and pride,
With incense| kindled| at the muse's flame.

19.

Far| from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes| never learn'd to stray,
Along the cool| sequester'd vale of life
They kept the noiseless ténor| of their way.

Yet even these bones from insult to protect,
Some frail memorial| still erected nigh,
With uncouth rhymes and shapeless sculpture| deck'd,
Implóres the passing tribute of a sigh.

21.

Their name, their years, spell'd by th' unlettered muse,
The place of fame and elegy| supply ;
And many a holy text| around| she stréws,
That teach the rustic moralist| to die.

22.

For whò| to dumb forgetfulness a préy,
This pleasing| anxious being| e'er resigned,
Left the warm precincts of the cheerful day,
Nor cast| oné| longing| lingering look behind?

23.

On some fond breast| the parting soul relies,
 Some pious drops| the closing eye requires ;
 Even from the tomb| the voice of nature cries,
 Even in our ashes| live their wonted fires.

24.

For thée, who, mindful of the unhonor'd dèad,
 Dost| in these lines| their artless tale relâte,
 If chance, by lonely contemplation léd,
 Some kindred spirit| shall inquire thy fâte,—

25.

Haply| some hoary-headed swain may sáy,
 “ Oft have we séen him, at the peep of dáwn,
 Brushing with hasty steps the dews áway,
 To meet the sùn| upon the upland làwn.

26.

“Thère| at the foot of yonder nodding béech,
 That wreathes its old fantastic roots so hígh,
 His listless length| at noontide would he strétch,
 And pore upon the brook| that babbles by.

27.

“Hard by yon wóod, now smiling as in scórn,
 Muttering his wayward fancies, he would ròve ;
 Now drooping, wòful, wán, like one forlòrn,
 Or crazed with cáre, or cross'd in hopeless lòve.

28.

“One morn I miss'd him on the accustom'd hill,
 Along the heath, and near his favorite trée ;

Another càme ; nor yet beside the ríll,
Nor up the láwn, nor at the wòod was hè :

29.

“ The next, with dirges due, in sad arráy,
Slow through the church-way path we saw him bòrne :
Approach, and read (for thou cànst réad) the lày
Graved on the stone| benéath yon aged thorn.”

THE EPITAPH.

Here rests his head upon the lap of earth,
A youth to fortune and to fame unknown ;
Fair Science frown'd not on his humble birth,
And Melancholy mark'd him for her own.
Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere,
Heav'n did a recompense as largely send :
He gave to mis'ry all he had, a tear ;
He gain'd from heav'n ('twas all he wish'd) a friend.
No farther seek his merits to disclose,
Or draw his frailties from their dread abode ;
(There they, alike, in trembling hope repose,)
The bosom of his Father and his God.

QUESTIONS ON THE READING OF THE ELEGY.

1st Stanza.—Henderson, an eminent reader of the 18th century, made “tolls” an intransitive verb, and “knell” an appositive to “curfew.” How would this affect the emphasis, pause and inflection of the 1st line?

4th Stanza.—Why should the 4th line of this stanza be read higher than the 3rd and the 2nd lines ; and which of the three preceding lines must be grouped in pitch and movement with the 4th line? Give reasons. (Par. 198.)

6th Stanza.—What feeling and what quality of voice should mark the reading of this stanza? (Par. 205.)

10th Stanza.—What inflection and quality of voice should prevail in reading this stanza?

11th Stanza.—Why should the rising inflection prevail in this stanza, and why should it terminate with the falling inflection? (Par. 172.)

12th Stanza.—In what spirit should this stanza be read, and what pitch and quality of voice would best represent its spirit? Note the relation in thought, and therefore in voice, between this and the 15th stanza.

14th Stanza.—How are the similes in this stanza to be distinguished from the passages of the 15th stanza? (Par. 202.)

15th Stanza.—What emphasis is given to “Hampden,” “Milton” and “Cromwell,” and whether should “village” or “Hampden” have the greater force? Give reasons.

16th, 17th and 18th Stanzas.—Why should “guiltless” have emphasis? What leading co-ordinate grammatical members are there in these stanzas, and what subordinate members, and how shall their connection and distinction be expressed by the voice?

20th Stanza.—Why should the emphasis be given to “these”? Supposing it were given to “bones,” what change would that make in the meaning of the passage?

The pause after “memorial,” the rising inflection to “nigh,” and the lower modulation given to the phrase, show its subordination to “memorial.” What change in grammatical construction and what meaning would be given to the two lines, if that phrase were read as high as “memorial,” and “nigh” had a falling inflection?

How should the relation of “deck’d” and “implores” with the grammatical subject, be shown?

21st Stanza.—Why should “name,” “years,” and “supply” have most prominence, and how is that prominence given? (Par. 191.)

24th and 25th Stanzas.—To what passage in the 25th stanza does “For thee” refer, and how shall the voice be made to show the relation? Which are the principal passages and which the subordinate in the two stanzas, and how shall the distinction be marked by the voice? What distinction should be made between the subordinate clauses of the 25th and those of the 24th stanza? (This is a very important distinction, and a correct analysis of the sentence, guided by the rules for the reading of principal, subordinate and noun sentences, paragraphs 198, 199, and 204, will prepare the student to answer these questions.)

Name and mark the emphatic words in stanza 28.

What pitch and movement, and generally what spirit, should mark the reading of the 29th stanza? Mark its rhetorical pauses.

Mark the inflections and pauses and emphatic words of the three stanzas of the Epitaph.

How shall the last line, and especially “The bosom,” be made to show its relation to the word in the second of which it is the appositive, and the third line be distinguished from the others by quality of voice?

Correct errors of inflection, pause and emphasis in the following passages, and give reasons for the alteration. The emphatic words are in italics : —

Beneath those rugged elms, that yew-tree's shàde,
Where heaves the turf in many a mouldering heap,
Each in his narrow cell for ever laid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sléep.

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn,
 Or busy housewife ply her evening care :
 No children run to lisp their sire's return ;
 Or climb | his knees the envied | kiss to share.

Inflections. Occasional Exceptions.

Stanza 11.—According to Rule III., par. 172, every question beginning with a verb should end with a rising inflection. It is proper, however, for the prevention of monotonous similarity, that in a series of questions of this kind the last may end with a falling inflection. According to Rule I., par. 172, the extensions and modifications of the grammatical predicate when they precede the governing verb, i. e., when the sentence is inverted, take a rising inflection. Good taste and experience, however, allow an exception to this rule when, as in the following example, there are several separate and independent clauses in the inverted form. That exception is to give a falling inflection to every clause excepting the last. When this exception is carried out, the reader may in such an example as the following give the inflections as marked, but in all such instances he must be cautious that there shall be no descent in pitch on the final word or syllable. Thus in “command,” the syllable —“mand” should slightly rise in pitch, then descend in inflection, as if it were printed cóm^{mand}.

In the same way read “despise” and “land.” But as “eyes” is the last word of the dependent clauses it takes the rising inflection.

The applause of listening senates to command,
 The threats of pain and ruin to despise,
 To scatter plenty o'er a smiling land,
 And read their history in a nation's eyes,
 Their lot forbade.

When the logical subject of a sentence has several members, or when it is compound, the inflections that end each member or subject may be varied so long as the rising inflection is given to the last one immediately preceding the subject.

As such exceptions are purely optional and left to the taste of the reader, they must not be regarded as strict rules.

Examination Questions.

SECTION I.

1. What organs of the body are engaged in the production of voice?
2. What is the structure of the lungs, and how does the air act upon them?
3. How are they connected with the external air?
4. Where is the larynx?
5. Name the various parts of the throat engaged in producing voice.
6. Explain the nature and action of the diaphragm in producing voice.

SECTION II.

7. Describe the active and passive chest.
8. Explain the methods of executing deep, effusive, expulsive, explosive and abrupt breathing.

SECTION II. CHAPTER III.

9. Define pure and impure tones.
10. Explain the method of managing the vocal organs for producing pure tones.
11. Describe, and if possible delineate, the forms of the mouth in sounding ah, awe, o, oo, ā, ee.
12. Give a list of the vowel sounds.

13. What names does Dr. Rush give them, and why?
14. Name the compound vowels and give their constituents.
15. What defects are observed in sounding i in fine, and a as in male
16. What corrupt sound of ou in house is given, and how corrected?
17. What is the corruption of i in such words as ability, charity, behold, &c.?
18. Explain the method of practice for sounding the vowels.
(Chapter V.)
19. Explain the method of explosive practice.
20. Explain and give a table of vowels according to their length or quantity.
21. Select a passage and mark off the vowels according to their number in the table (p. 22).
22. What is meant by articulation? (Chap. VI.)
23. What are liquids, and what power do they possess in speech?
24. Describe the processes for securing complete articulation.
25. Name all the atonics or aspirants.
26. Name their corresponding sub-tonics or sub-vocals.
27. Name the labials, and explain the action of the mouth in uttering them.
28. Name and describe the action of Dentals, Palate sounds, Nasal sounds, Aspirates and Linguals.
29. Explain how to correct the errors in connection with h.

SECTION III.

30. What is modulation ?
31. What is meant by the terms concrete and discrete ?
32. Explain the key board of a piano.
33. Write out a musical scale for voice practice, and describe the method of practice.
34. Draw a gamut ladder, and show how it may be used.
35. Explain the method of Inflection and its difference from Pitch. (Chap. II.)
36. Draw a scale for practising inflection, and explain the method of practice.
37. What is meant by Quality of Voice ?
38. Name the essentials of a pure voice.
39. Describe the conditions for practice on quality of voice, viz. : (1) Method of breathing. (2) Carriage of the body. (3) Position of and form of the mouth and its organs.
40. What vowel sounds are the best for practice, and why ? How must we practise ?
41. Describe the orotund voice.
42. Describe the preparatory exercises for acquiring it.
43. What composition is the orotund best adapted for ?
44. Define stress.
45. What effect has violent force on the throat, and how is it to be corrected ?

46. Name the three leading forms of stress.
47. Define each of them.
48. State the kinds of compositions to which each of these forms of stress is most appropriate.
49. What stress is most appropriate for Paradise Lost and the Psalms? For light and gay compositions? For expressions of strong hatred?
50. Name the derivative forms of stress, and state what compositions they best suit.

SECTION IV.

51. Explain grammatical and rhetorical pauses.
52. What divisions of the sentence determine the place for the rhetorical pause?
53. What parts of speech require a pause before them?
54. Select a sentence, and mark off the pauses.
55. What caution is to be observed in attending to the rhetorical pauses?
56. Define Inflection.
57. What is the difference between pitch and inflection?
58. Give the general principles for rising and falling inflections.
59. What inflection to an introductory dependent clause or phrase?
60. What inflection for the nominative of address, for appeals and exclamations?
61. What inflection to negative sentences?

62. What exception to this rule ?
63. What class of questions takes a rising, and what class a falling inflection ?
64. What is the rule for inflecting appositives ?
65. When have dependent phrases and clauses a falling inflection ?
66. What forms of sentences take falling inflections ?
67. In a series of independent clauses what are the inflections ?
68. What is the rule for antithetical clauses or forms ?
69. Define Circumflex Inflections.
70. When are circumflex inflections appropriate ?
71. What is the monotone, and when appropriate ?
72. Select any passage, and mark it with all the proper inflections.
73. Define Pitch—high, low, and middle—and distinguish it from Inflection.
74. In simple sentences, which parts receive the higher pitch ?
75. When do qualifying words require greater prominence ?
76. How are explanatory phrases and clauses delivered ?
77. What pitch is given to the predicate ?
78. In complex sentences, what pitch is given to the principal, and what pitch to the subordinate clause ?
79. What subordinate sentence takes the same pitch as the principal sentence, and why ?
80. How are parenthetical clauses rendered ?

81. Give examples of pitch in its application to the various forms of sentences, italicizing the sentences and parts which require a higher pitch.
82. State what kinds of composition require the low, the middle, and the high pitch; select examples.
83. Define Movement.
84. How is movement adapted to the various classes of expressions?
85. How can we read slowly?
86. What consonants and vowels allow of prolonged time?
87. Name the defects of movement.
88. Explain Dr. Rush's method for acquiring facility of utterance.
89. Give other modes of practice.
90. Define Emphasis.
91. Define the two forms of Emphasis.
92. What parts of speech take the Emphasis of Sense?
93. Mark off the words in a passage demanding the emphasis of sense.
94. Define and explain the principle of Emphasis of Feeling.
95. Explain the qualities of voice required for emphasis of feeling.
96. Select a passage and mark off the words demanding emphasis of feeling.
97. Explain the Emphatic Tie.

98. Select a passage and italicize the parts requiring the emphatic tie.
99. Define Transition.
100. What is the general rule for transition ?
101. Select a passage and explain the necessary transition.
102. Define Imitative Modulation, with examples.

APPENDIX.

Rules for Inflection, par. 172, p. 63.

RULE III. CORRECTED.—All questions beginning with verbs, or that can be answered by “yes” or “no”—the questioner not knowing which answer will be given—take a rising inflection. But if the questioner knows the answer will be “yes” or “no,” the question ends with a falling inflection.

As this last rule is founded upon a mental principle indicating a positive state of mind and all absence of doubt, such questions have the certainty of perfect knowledge, and therefore are equivalent to an affirmation. The following examples illustrate the nature and application of the principle:—

When Mark Antony (p. 150) says,

“You all did see that on the Lupercal,

“I thrice presented him a kingly crown

“Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?”—

he meant that the refusal of Cæsar to accept the highest object of political ambition, gave undoubted evidence that he was not ambitious; therefore the question is declarative of perfect knowledge, and ends with a falling inflection.

Cassius, in the quarrel scene, when Brutus reproaches him for having boasted that he was a “better soldier,” having forgotten in the heat of passion that he had implied that boast, replies,

“You wrong me, every way; you wrong me, Brutus,

“I said an elder soldier, not a better.—

“Did I say better?”

There is no doubt in his mind on the subject; therefore the question ends with a falling inflection on “better.”

“Do we indeed desire the dead

“Should still be near us at our side?”

Here, because there is doubt, “side” takes a rising inflection.

“Is there no baseness we would hide,

“No inner vileness that we dread?”

Both these questions indicate the assurance of conviction—there is no doubt of the baseness and the inner vileness, and therefore the sentence is not interrogative excepting in form, but affirmative. It is the necessity for this analysis of thought that makes elocution a study of a high intellectual character, and gives the deepest interest to its investigations.

Inflection.—In addition to the practise presented in Par. 77, p. 29, it is recommended that besides sounding the vowels alone the pupil should also give to the sounds the exact inflections they demand when reading the passage. Thus:—

“ The clóud-cápped tówers, the górgéous páláces,
The solémn témplès, the gréat glóbe itsélf,
Yeá, áll which it inherít, shall dissólve,
And, like this unsubstantial pageánt, fádéd,
Leáve not a ráck behind,”

Coup de la Glotte, Par. 99. p. 33.

This expression is not explained in the text. It means literally a stroke or blow of the glottis. It is practised by the best scientific singing masters in the schools of Paris, &c., and the methods of practice are explained in Par. 144, p. 51, Par. 72, p. 26, and Par. 38, p. 18.

Rate or Movement.

Principal sentences must be read slower than subordinate ones. Parenthetic sentences or phrases, when strictly subordinate to, and of less importance than the interrupted clause, are read faster than such a clause.

Here, however, the mere structure is not guide enough. A parenthetic clause will sometimes be adversative to the main clause, or express a solemn interjectional thought of exalted character, and it then claims more regard than the main thought, that is, it must be read in slower time.

Figurative Language.

The two leading figures are the Simile and the Metaphor. The simile is very much like the parenthesis, regarded from a reading point of view. It is a divergence from the main literal expression. If then the simile tends to exalt the main thought, it becomes an important illustration, and must be read more slowly; but if it serves to depreciate the character of the main thought, it must be read faster.

The metaphor takes the place of the leading literal thought. It is that thought ornamented with the hues of the imagination, and hence it is in no degree subordinate, like the simile ; and from the importance which the coloring of the imagination attaches to it, it may be often read in slower time. The following passage illustrates these two figures. It is a prolonged metaphor, the solemn rehearsal of a wasted life. The second line is a simile expressive of the folly of such a life, and it should be read in a higher pitch and faster than the metaphor. But the metaphor should be read very slowly.

I have ventured,
(Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders)
This many summers in a sea of glory ;
But far beyond my depth : my high-blown pride
At length broke under me ; and now has left me
Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream that must for ever hide me.

—Henry VIII.

Narrative and Dialogue.

A clear distinction must be made in the reading of mixed narrative and dialogue. Even when that narrative is only "He said," and like phrases, the distinction must be observed. Narrative is marked by less inflection and quicker movement. The dialogue or quotation, is inflected more strongly in proportion to the fervor of passion expressed by it, and faster or slower than the mere narrative, according to the exalted or depreciatory tone of the sentiment. In the passage, "And Nathan said unto David, Thou art the man," the solemnity of the accusation suggests slower movement in its delivery than the narrative. Let the reader observe the distinction (1) between the narrative and the dialogue, and (2) render the dialogue with the time due to its importance and nature, and the proper dramatic effect will be secured.

Emphasis, p. 81.

The methods of Emphasis have been explained—par. 214-219. But the Emphasis of Feeling, or Arbitrary Emphasis, depends on the mental state of the speaker, and therefore on the conception formed of that mental state by the reader. This conception cannot be aided by grammatical analysis. The thought, and not its verbal form, must be analyzed. The principles on which this emphasis depends, however, are simple, and may be explained as follows :

The term Emphasis of Feeling indicates that the emphatic word must give expression to the prominent feeling of the speaker, and the word which best expresses that feeling represents (1) a new thought, or a marked and special state of feeling. (2) The thought or feeling thus expressed must also be a leading, and therefore an important one ; and (3) it must involve in its importance a contrast with some other thought or feeling to which it bears a certain antagonism. Hence it involves unexpressed antithesis. Thus, in Clarence's Dream, p. 93, the spirit of Warwick cried—

“ What scourge for perjury,
Can this dark monarchy afford false
Clarence ? ”

Here it is clear that the great crime, “ perjury,” is the leading idea, and it carried with it the three qualities of novelty, importance and antagonism with truth.

Again, when Portia in the Trial Scene says, “ Then must the Jew be merciful,” Shylock, who fully relies on the constancy of Venetian law and the legality of his claim, and whose self-esteem is assailed by the imperative “ must ” of Portia, gives impassioned energy to that word, i.e., emphasis of feeling, when he asks,

“ On what compulsion must I ?—tell me that.”

To him this word “ must ” was the new thought, the all-important one if admitted, and the one antagonistic to his claim.

As a rule, it is important to remember that the recurrence of this new thought does not justify a repetition of emphasis.

It sometimes occurs that the repetition is immediate ; as in—

Arm ! Arm, it is—it is the cannon's opening roar.

In such cases, the repetition demands increased emphasis, as it is made under the conviction that the first cry or assertion has not been given with force enough.

This, then, is the summary of principles guiding the reader in selecting the emphatic word.

1. It must represent a new idea.
2. It must represent a leading or important idea.
3. It must suggest antagonism to some other idea,

HAMBLIN SMITH'S MATHEMATICAL WORKS

ARE USED ALMOST EXCLUSIVELY

In the Normal and Model Schools, Toronto; Upper Canada College; Hamilton and Brantford Collegiate Institutes; Bowmanville, Berlin, Belleville, and a large number of leading High Schools in the Province.

HAMBLIN SMITH'S ALGEBRA,

With Appendix, by Alfred Baker, B.A., Mathematical Tutor, University College, Toronto. Price, 90 cents.

THOMAS KIRKLAND, M.A., Science Master, Normal School.

"It is the text-book on Algebra for candidates for second-class certificates, and for the Intermediate Examination. Not the least valuable part of it is the Appendix by Mr. Baker."

GEO. DICKSON, B.A., Head Master, Collegiate Institute, Hamilton

"Arrangement of subjects good; explanations and proofs exhaustive, concise and clear; examples, for the most part from University and College Examination Papers, are numerous, easy and progressive. There is no better Algebra in use in our High Schools and Collegiate Institutes."

WM. R. RIDDELL, B.A., B. Sc., Mathematical Master, Normal School, Ottawa.

"The Algebra is admirable, and well adapted as a general text-book."

W. E. TILLEY, E.A., Mathematical Master, Bowmanville High School.

"I look on the Algebra as decidedly the best Elementary Work on the subject we have. The examples are excellent and well arranged. The explanations are easily understood."

R. DAWSON, B.A., T.C.D., Head Master, High School, Belleville.

"With Mr. Baker's admirable Appendix, there would seem to be nothing left to be desired. We have now a first-class book, well adapted in all respects to the wants of pupils of all grades, from the beginner in our Public Schools to the most advanced student in our Collegiate Institutes and High Schools. Its publication is a great boon to the over-worked mathematical teachers of the Province."

THE COMPLETE COMPOSITION EXERCISE BOOKS,

IN THREE NUMBERS.

By James Hughes, Inspector of Public Schools, Toronto.

NOS. 1 & 2, 10 CENTS EACH. No. 3, 20 CENTS.

THOMAS HENDERSON, Inspector of Public Schools, Paris

* * * Am pleased with their adoption in schools under my inspection.

A. ANDREWS, Head Master, H. S., Niagara

* * * Have used your Composition Exercise Books for some weeks, and find them just the thing desired for inducing a careful painstaking style. My pupils take great pride in writing the first copy so well that they shall not require correction and consequent re-writing. The prominence given to the corrections drives them to study closely the rules for punctuation and the principles that govern the structure of the English language.

DONALD J. MCKINNON, Insp. Public Schools, Brampton.

* * * To those who desire to teach Composition systematically, I can confidently recommend Hughes' Composition Books, No. 3 for Senior pupils and Nos. 1 and 2 for Juniors.

A. P. KNIGHT, M. A., Rector, Kingston Collegiate Institute.

After carefully looking over Hughes' Exercise Books on English Composition, I have decided to use it in the Junior Forms of the Institute just as soon as the booksellers here can furnish us with a supply of the same.

J. M. PLATT, M.D., P. S. Inspector, Town of Pieton.

An examination of Hughes' Complete Composition Exercise Books, makes me almost envy the Teachers and Students of the present. The progress in the science of teaching and the various inventions to facilitate the imparting of instruction to the young cannot fail to be gratifying to all who recognize the education of the youth of the land as the hope and glory of the future. English Composition is, to the youthful mind, the PONS ASINORUM of literary pursuits; and no single subject has given so much trouble to instructors. Your Composition Books make pleasant and easy, what has heretofore been vexatious and difficult. No school can be said to be properly equipped without them. Every teacher must exclaim when he sees them, "just what we want."

J. B. SOMERSET, P. S. Inspector, Co. Lincoln.

* * * It will be a much needed help to the teaching of Composition in our Schools.

BEATTY & CLARE'S BOOK-KEEPING,

A TREATISE ON SINGLE AND DOUBLE ENTRY BOOK-KEEPING,

FOR USE IN HIGH AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS,

By S. G. BEATTY, Principal Ontario Commercial College, Belleville, and SAMUEL CLARE, Book-Keeping and Writing Master, Normal School, Toronto.

PRICE 70 CENTS.

T. O. STEEL, Inspector, P. S. Co., Prescott.

. . . . I consider "Beatty & Clare's Book-keeping" plain and simple, yet sufficiently comprehensive for all practical purposes, and especially fitted for a school text book.

WM. TASSEE, LL.D., H. M., Galt Col. Institute.

. . . . Simple, clear, devoid of confusing definitions and very practical throughout.

J. W. CONNOR, B.A., H. M., H. S., Berlin.

. . . . I consider it the best elementary work on the subject that I have yet seen.

D. C. McHENRY, M.A., Principal Cobourg Collegiate Institute.

I consider Beatty & Clare's Book-keeping an excellent text book.

A. YOUNG, Principal of Berlin, C. S.

The work on Book-keeping by Beatty & Clare is the best that I ever saw.

JOHN WILSON, Math. Master, Port Hope H. S.

. . . . I feel safe in recommending the work to my fellow teachers throughout the Province, as one well adapted to ensure thoroughness in the art of Book-keeping.

HUGH J. STRANG, B.A., H. M., H. S., Goderich.

. . . . Its elucidation of the subject being clear and adequate, the work will prove a valuable aid to all who may wish to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the principles of Book-keeping.

J. S. CARSON, Inspector, Middlesex.

. . . . I am assured from an examination that it is superior to any other work for our Canadian Schools.
